Americans and Their Forests Michael Williams,1992-06-26 Dr Williams begins by exploring the role of the forest in American culture the symbols themes and concepts for example pioneer woodsman lumberjack wilderness generated by contact with the vast land of trees He considers the Indian use of the forest describing the ways in which native tribes altered it primarily through fire to promote a subsistence economy Environment and History William Beinart,Peter Coates,2002-01-08 The influence of human economies and cultures on ecosystems is particularly striking in the new worlds into which Europeans have expanded over the past five hundred years Using a comparative and multidisciplinary approach Beinart and Coates examine this neglected aspect of the history of settler incursion and dominance in two frontier nations the USA and South Africa They also seek to explain change in indigenous ideas and practices towards the environment and discuss the rise of popular environmentalism up to the present day Empire Forestry and the Origins of Environmentalism Gregory Allen Barton,2002-10-17 What we now know of as environmentalism began with the establishment of the first empire forest in 1855 in British India and during the second half of the nineteenth century over ten per cent of the land surface of the earth became protected as a public trust Sprawling forest reservations many of them larger than modern nations became revenue producing forests that protected the whole household of nature and Rudyard Kipling and Theodore Roosevelt were among those who celebrated a new class of government foresters as public heroes Imperial foresters warned of impending catastrophe desertification and global climate change if the reverse process of deforestation continued The empire forestry movement spread through India Africa Australia New Zealand Canada and then the United States to other parts of the globe and Gregory Barton s study looks at the origins of environmentalism in a global perspective A Companion to Global Environmental History J. Cohen, 2004-05-11 Trees hold a powerful place in American constructions of what is good in nature and the environment As we attempt to cope with environmental crises trees are increasingly enlisted with great fervor as agents of our stewardship over nature In this innovative and impassioned book Shaul E Cohen exposes the way that environmental stewardship is undermined through the manipulation of trees and the people who plant them by a partnership of big business the government and tree planting groups He reveals how positive associations and symbols that have been invested in trees are exploited by an interlocking network of government agencies private timber companies and nongovernmental organizations to subvert the power of people who think that they are building a better world Planting Nature details the history of tree planting in the United States and the rise of popular sentiment around trees including the development of the Arbor Day holiday and tree planting groups such as the National Arbor Day Foundation and American Forests Drawing from internal papers government publications advertisements and archival documents Cohen illustrates how organizations promote tree planting as a way of shifting attention away from the causes of environmental problems to their symptoms masking business as usual agendas Ultimately Planting Nature challenges the relationships between a green public the organizations that promote their causes and the powers that be providing a cautionary tale of cooperation and deception that cuts across the political spectrum

Environmental Infrastructure in African History Emmanuel Kreike, 2013-05-13 Environmental Infrastructure in African History offers a new approach for analyzing and narrating environmental change Environmental change conventionally is understood as occurring in a linear fashion moving from a state of more nature to a state of less nature and more culture In this model non Western and premodern societies live off natural resources whereas more modern societies rely on artifact or nature that is transformed and domesticated through science and technology into culture In contrast Emmanuel Kreike argues that both non Western and premodern societies inhabit a dynamic middle ground between nature and culture He asserts that humans in collaboration with plants animals and other animate and inanimate forces create environmental infrastructure that constantly is remade and reimagined in the face of ongoing processes of change
