

JOINT ENTERPRISE

Joint enterprise involves the secondary party having an active role to play in the commission of the offence.

There are 3 principles:

1. Liability for the unexpected consequences of executing the joint enterprise

In Anderson and Morris, Lord Parker held that where two persons embark on a joint enterprise, each is liable for the liability including the unusual consequences if they arise from the execution of the joint enterprise.

In Baldessare, (D1 took a car for a joyride at an excessive speed. He invited D2 to join him. The joyride ended in the death of a pedestrian). It was held that both shared the common purpose to engage in a particularly dangerous driving for the sake of thrill.

2. Liability for accidental deviations in the course of executing the joint enterprise

A procures P to kill C by poison. P mistakenly administers the poison to V, not C. V is poisoned and dies.

P is guilty of the murder of V. A is complicit because that both A and P take responsibility under the doctrine of transferred malice.

In Gnango, (A and P engaged in a gunfight in public, each intending to kill or cause serious injury to the other. P accidentally shot and killed a passerby) It was held that whoever killed the passer was guilty of murder on the transferred malice doctrine and the other person being a party to a joint enterprise is also liable. It is a criticized authority as they both shared no common purpose and it implies that one can aid and abet one's own murder.
