

Patented and controversial – could be used in medical treatments, new endangered species, bring back extinct species, less invasive care, decrease biodiversity

Genetic engineering – changing an organism's DNA to give the organism new traits

Recombinant DNA – DNA with genes from more than one organism; genes often inserted into bacterial plasmids

Transgenic bacteria – have plasmids with recombinant DNA, used to make human insulin

Transgenic plants – bacteria with recombinant DNA infect plants; used to make crops resistant to disease, insects, frost

Transgenic animals – gene must be inserted in fertilized egg, used for medical research and to study gene expression

Concerns – long-term effects of GM crops on human health, biodiversity; possible unintended consequences

Section 9.5

Gene sequencing – determining the sequence of a gene or an entire genome

Genomics – study of entire genomes; can include sequencing of entire genomes, compare genomes within and across species to find similarities and differences among different organisms

Human Genome Project – sequenced entire human genome; still working on identifying all genes, finding their locations, and determining their functions

Bioinformatics – using computer databases to organize and analyze the vast amounts of data that result from studies of genomes (and other biological information)

DNA microarrays – allow scientists to study the expression of many genes at one time; used to compare gene expression in different types of cells

Proteomics – study and comparison of proteins within and across species; used to study evolutionary relationships and human diseases

Section 9.8

Genetic screening – the process of testing DNA to determine a person's risk of having or passing on a genetic disorder; can test for BRCA1 mutation

Detecting disorders – tests can detect genes that produce disorders such as cystic fibrosis
