

Dbq 10 causes of the french revolution answer key

Declaration of the rights of Man & the Citizen in the Reign of Terror Fueled by the Enlightenment ideas, the French revolution from 1789 - 1815 is an event of great international importance. Not only did it mark the rise of Napoleon Bonaparte, who became one of the greatest emperor in the world history, but also marked the destruction of the Old Regime. This was when France changed from a monarchy to a republic, the first French Republic. This was the revolution that brought change in the structure of the society.

The revolution, led by the middle class, meant the end of the tyranny of the King and the aristocracy and marked the rising of the working class. It marked the end of an era. But most importantly, in a world where absolute monarchy was still prevailing, and where the divine right of the King and the power of the nobility were still prevailing, the French Revolution brought about a rebellious attitude. This was a rebellion towards the old traditions which, later, started to spread the ideas of equality all over France and eventually all over Europe.

This was the period when various philosophical ideas were starting to prevail all over Europe and the French republic was attempting to maintain order and peace within the country, amidst a lot of violence and bloodshed. One of the documents that stand out from this period is the Declaration of the Rights of man and the Citizen through which the government attempted to maintain order in the country. In August 1789, the national assembly published a document declaring that "men are born and remain free and equal in rights" (405).

This was the Declaration of the Rights of man and the Citizen. This declaration can be considered an enlightenment document because it is filled with the ideas of Voltaire, Montesquieu and other enlightenment philosophers. The French Revolution was a social revolution. It was a revolution against inability of King Louis the XVI to address the famine that was widespread in the country. It was the revolution from the people, for the people, by the people against the social inequalities that were prevailing during the era.

Since these ideals had to be carried on after the overthrowing of the King, believe that the republic attempted to gain faith of the public, by putting those ideals on the paper, and declaring them to the public. Equality before the law, careers open to talent, right to speech and protest, these were some of the basic arguments of the Declaration of the Rights of the Man & the Citizen. The main aim of the government was to increase people's trust on the shaky establishment.

Therefore, the government made sure that the declaration had clear points in the declaration stating that it is the government's job to protect the rights of the people and that the government was accountable for what it did and would owe the public.
