

Chapter 13

Which of the following might result in a human zygote with 45 chromosomes?

- an error in either egg or sperm meiotic anaphase

Which of the following is true of a species that has a chromosome number of $2n = 16$?

- Each diploid cell has eight homologous pairs.

Which of the following is an example of alternation of generations?

- A diploid plant (sporophyte) produces, by meiosis, a spore that gives rise to a multicellular, haploid pollen grain (gametophyte).

In eukaryotes, genetic information is passed to the next generation by processes that include mitosis or meiosis. Which of the explanations identifies the correct process and supports the claim that heritable information is passed from one generation to another?

- In asexual reproduction, a single individual is the sole parent and passes copies of its genes to its offspring without the fusion of gametes.

If a cell has completed meiosis I and is just beginning meiosis II, which of the following is an appropriate description of its contents?

- It has half the amount of DNA as the cell that began meiosis.

For the following questions, match the key event of meiosis with the stages listed below.

Centromeres of sister chromatids disjoin and chromatids separate.

- Anaphase II

You have isolated DNA from three different cell types of the same organism, determined the relative DNA content for each type, and plotted the results on the graph shown in the figure below. Refer to the graph to answer the following question(s). Which sample might represent a zygote?

- I

If a horticulturist breeding gardenias succeeds in having a single plant with a particularly desirable set of traits, which of the following would be her most probable and efficient route to establishing a line of such plants?

- Clone the plant asexually to produce an identical one.

Refer to the life cycles illustrated in the figure below to answer the following question(s).

Which of the life cycles is typical for plants and some algae?

- III only
