this volume the writer has been guided by the general purpose of the Series of Theological Handbooks of which it is a part A continuous narrative is given in the text with as much freedom from technical treatment as the subject allows details and authorities are relegated to footnotes and some special questions and difficulties are dealt with in notes appended to the several chapters The chief aim which has been kept in view throughout has been to offer to the student of the history of Christian Doctrine during the first four centuries of the life of the Church such information with regard to the facts and the sources as will enable him to prosecute his study for himself It is only a limited period with which the book deals but a period in which the Christian theory of life of the relations between God the World and Man was worked out in its chief aspects and all the doctrines to which the Church of Christ as a whole is pledged were framed The authority of these doctrines is only to be understood by study of their history Their permanent value can only be appreciated by knowledge of the circumstances in which they came to be expressed knowledge which must certainly precede any restatement of the doctrines such as is from time to time demanded in the interests of a growing or a wider faith That Christian thinkers have been guided at various times in later ages towards fuller apprehension of various aspects of human life and fuller knowledge of the divine economy must be thankfully acknowledged About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
