Asia and Pacific Dept, 2018-07-03 This Selected Issues paper focuses on gaps and multiplier effects of infrastructure investment in New Zealand There has been high quality work done to quantify the infrastructure gap for New Zealand by Oxford Economics on behalf of the Global Infrastructure Hub drawing on international experiences and local data sources but recognizing the risk that the infrastructure gap may be even larger than that stated in this work This paper provides further analysis about the effects on New Zealand s economy of closing the infrastructure gap Closing the gap has quantifiable benefits not just because it is a short term stimulus to aggregate demand but because of longer lived effects on productivity benefiting all sectors of the economy There are prospective gains from closing New Zealand s infrastructure gap New Zealand has improved its infrastructure spending in the past several years Nonetheless there is scope to expand it further to reduce its admittedly small but probably understated infrastructure gap to match other advanced economies and possibly help with regional development concerns Larry's 2016 U.S. Tax Guide 'Supplement' for U.S. Expats, Green Card Holders and Non-Resident Aliens in User Friendly English Laurence E. Socioeconomic Inequality and Educational Outcomes Markus Broer,Yifan Bai, Frank Fonseca,2019-05-15 This open access book focuses on trends in educational inequality using twenty years of grade 8 student data collected from 13 education systems by the IEA s Trends in Mathematics and Science Study TIMSS between 1995 and 2015 While the overall positive association between family socioeconomic status SES and student achievement is well documented in the literature the magnitude of this relationship is contingent on social contexts and is expected to vary by education system Research on how such associations differ across societies and how the strength of these relationships has changed over time is limited This study therefore addresses an important research and policy question by examining changes in the inequality of educational outcomes due to SES over this 20 year period and also examines the extent to which the performance of students from disadvantaged backgrounds has improved over time in each education system Education systems generally aim to narrow the achievement gap between low and high SES students and to improve the performance of disadvantaged students However the lack of quantifiable and comprehensible measures makes it difficult to assess and monitor the effect of such efforts In this study a novel measure of SES that is consistent across all TIMSS cycles allows students to be categorized into different socioeconomic groups This measure of SES may also contribute to future research using TIMSS trend data Readers will gain new insight into how educational inequality has changed in the education systems studied and how such change may relate to the more complex picture of macroeconomic changes in those societies
