Cerny, 2022-04-27 The U S China educational exchange began auspiciously after a 30 year hiatus in 1978 when Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping announced his strategic decision to send 5 000 students and scholars from China each year to further their education 1 Then U S President Jimmy Carter famously responded Tell him to send 100 000 This was the launch of educational exchange as a core pillar of the U S China relationship Until the 40th anniversary of the normalization of U S China relations and U S China educational exchange in 2019 there was general agreement that the exchange of students and scholars benefited both countries There was recognition that the enormous increase in personal interaction and friendships and knowledge about each other s society culture economy and government strengthened understanding trust and cooperation At a time when U S China relations are at its lowest point since the normalization of relations the benefits of educational exchange are being questioned if not under assault Few could have predicted that Chinese students would be weaponized by both sides caught up in the political and security disputes between the two governments A trade war political tensions concerns about academic espionage and influence operations rising incidents of anti Asian hate and a global pandemic have created a perfect storm to stir up distrust as well as retaliatory measures that restrict student mobility on both sides of the Pacific After years of fast growth the number of Chinese students and researchers coming to the U S has slowed China is still the largest source of international students in the U S accounting for about one third of the total but America s appeal is weakening Is this shift toward declining numbers an overdue correction to better protect America against academic espionage and influence operations and prevent China from capitalizing on American know how to accelerate its own progress Or is this decline in numbers an unnecessary and damaging hit on American universities preeminent position in global higher education and its open science model leading to loss of U S competitiveness and international prestige This report more broadly is an attempt to discern the benefits risks and challenges of U S China educational exchange and determine how educational exchange can advance the interests of both the U S and China going forward Journal of the Association of College Admissions Counselors ,1973 Two-Year Colleges - 2010

Kim,2023-04-04 How universities in the US and South Korea compete for global student markets and how university financials shape students lives The popular image of the international student in the American imagination is one of affluence access and privilege but is that image accurate In this provocative book higher education scholar Stephanie Kim challenges this view arguing that universities not the students allow students their international mobility Focusing on universities in the US and South Korea that aggressively grew their student pools in the aftermath of the Great Recession Kim shows the lengths universities will go to expand enrollments as they draw from the same pool of top South Korean students Kim closely follows several students attending a university in Berkeley and a university in Seoul They have chosen different paths to study abroad or learn at home but all are seeking a transformative educational experience To show how student mobility depends on institutional structures Kim demonstrates how the universities themselves compel students choices to pursue higher learning at one institution or another She also profiles the people who help ensure the global student supply chain runs smoothly from education agents in South Korea to community college recruiters in California Using ethnographic research gathered over a ten year period in which international admissions were impacted by the Great Recession changes in US presidential administrations and the COVID 19 pandemic Constructing Student Mobility provides crucial insights into the purpose effects and future of student recruitment across the Pacific
