

A close-up photograph of the rear of a red New Holland combine harvester. The harvester is positioned in a field of harvested grain, with a large pile of golden-brown straw in the foreground. The rear of the machine features a prominent red panel with the words "NEW HOLLAND" in yellow, block letters. Below this panel is a large, yellow, cylindrical component, likely a straw chopper or deflatter, which has a series of black, curved blades or fingers. The harvester is moving from left to right, as evidenced by the straw pile. In the background, a green field and a stone building are visible under a clear sky.
