

The Political Thriller "House of Cards" by Beau Willimon

Topic: Art | Words: 1718 | Pages: 6

House of Cards is an American political thriller that was first aired online on the streaming service Netflix in 2013. The production of the show ended in 2018 after a total of 6 seasons, composed of 73 episodes.

Producer Perspective

House of Cards' executive producer was Beau Willimon, its director David Fincher, and its producer Karyn McCarthy. Beau is mainly interested in political shows and the pursuit of power within these settings. His main focus is on mirroring the real-life scenarios in television series, with a bit of dramatization that may point to exaggeration (IMDb). Beau is also an active participant in American politics in real life, having served as part of the Hillary Clinton 2000 senate race, and Dean's 2004 presidential campaign teams. The executive producer must have firsthand experience in the political arena, having worked for the above-mentioned teams. House of Cards demonstrates the glamor, pursuit, ambition, and struggle within the political scene, an unmistakable testament to the executive producer's experiences.

Democracy and the American political system are the issues at the heart of the producer's work. Behind the campaigns conducted in the glaring sight of the electorate, many deals occur to secure political power. This is exhibited in the first episode of the show as the producer reveals the deal between Francis Underwood and the president-elect should the Democratic Party rise to power (Netflix). The producer's agenda is to demonstrate the cost of power and democratic stability within the
