Traitors Cove Timber Sale* ,2007 Order JO 7340.1Z ,2007 Alaska Railroad Corporation Construction and Operation of a Rail Line Between North Pole and Delta Junction ,2009 Outer Continental Shelf Oil & Gas Leasing Program : 2007-2012 ,2006 Inputs of Nutrients and Pollutants to Hawaiian Coastal Waters from Submarine Groundwater Discharge Karen Lisa Knee,2010 Submarine groundwater discharge SGD is a spatially pervasive phenomenon that adds freshwater nutrients dissolved metals bacteria and other constituents to the coastal ocean This dissertation investigated SGD related inputs of nutrients and fecal indicator bacteria Escherichia coli and Enterococcus sp to coastal waters in two

Hawaiian locations the north shore of Kauai and the Kona coast of Hawaii. Concentrations of caffeine which has been used previously as a wastewater tracer were measured in groundwater and surface water on the north shore of Kauai. Both study areas have relatively light levels of urban and agricultural development and maintaining good water quality is essential for their tourism based economies, coral reefs, fisheries, and traditional way of life. Radium-226, an element with naturally elevated concentrations in coastal groundwater, was used as an SGD tracer and a mass balance approach was used to quantify SGD. On the north shore of Kauai, agriculture was associated with higher nitrate and nitrite concentrations in the fresh SGD component while phosphate and silica appeared to be controlled by geological differences in aquifer substrate. High ammonium concentrations in the fresh SGD component at one site may have been caused by a leaky cesspool. In Kona, no relation between urban development or agriculture and groundwater nutrient concentrations was observed, but bare lava rock was associated with higher nitrate, nitrite, and silica concentrations in fresh SGD. Sites closer to golf courses also had higher nitrate and nitrite concentrations. Conservative estimates of total SGD on the north shore of Kauai ranged from 1.3 to 7.8 L per meter per minute or up to 10% of Hanalei River discharge, and SGD contributed significant nitrate and nitrite inputs to Hanalei Bay. Estimates of SGD in Kona ranged from 5 to 1200 L per meter per minute, with between 10 and 100% of the brackish SGD comprised by the fresh SGD component. SGD related water and nutrient fluxes on the Kona Coast, where no rivers and streams are present, were large compared to those reported for other sites worldwide. Caffeine concentrations in environmental waters on the north shore of Kauai ranged from 0.88 ng/L on the low end of what has been reported for other locations. Metribuzin, an herbicide, was also detected at concentrations from 4.11 ng/L in five groundwater and surface water samples. A sensitivity analysis of Ra based methods of estimating water ages and coastal mixing rates revealed that water ages shorter than 3 d cannot be estimated with confidence using Ra based methods even if the only uncertainty considered is analytical error. In conclusion, this dissertation provides new data about SGD and related inputs of nutrients and bacteria to Hawaiian coastal waters, suggests that even low levels of development may influence nutrient concentrations in coastal groundwater, presents the first caffeine concentrations measured in environmental water samples collected in a tropical setting, and explores the limits of applicability of Ra based methods of estimating water ages and coastal mixing rates, providing guidance for researchers conducting Ra based SGD studies in the future.

Power in Practice Ryan Morgan, 2025-07-14. What happens when a key theological concept is almost entirely missing from a statement of faith? In this groundbreaking study, candid interviews with current and former clergy reveal how the absence of theological anthropology, the technical term for thinking Christianly about human beings, has resulted in the systemic power abuse of clergy within the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada (PAOC). Key issues such as exploitive employment arrangements spiritualization of mistreatment sexism bullying and even whistleblower retaliation punctuate the research and shine a light on a critical problem underlying Canada's largest Pentecostal movement. Featuring rich and varied interviews alongside thoughtful analysis, the strength of this study is in its ability to go beyond merely diagnosing problems. Drawing on Cameron et al.'s Four Voices of Theology: Power in Practice, proposes a bold and intentional series of recommendations for the PAOC and other evangelical movements wrestling with their conviction that a Christian ethic of power must be practiced in order to be faithful. Complete with practical steps for restoring accountability, responding to narcissism, and renewing theology, Power in Practice ultimately reminds the reader that power when transformed by Christ is expressed as an ethic of love.
