At its core information security deals with the secure and accurate transfer of information While information security has long been important it was perhaps brought more clearly into mainstream focus with the so called Y2K issue The Y2K scare was the fear that computer networks and the systems that are controlled or operated by software would fail with the turn of the millennium since their clocks could lose synchronization by not recognizing a number instruction with three zeros A positive outcome of this scare was the creation of several Computer Emergency Response Teams CERTs around the world that now work operatively to exchange expertise and information and to coordinate in case major problems should arise in the modern IT environment The terrorist attacks of 11 September 2001 raised security concerns to a new level The international community responded on at least two fronts one front being the transfer of reliable information via secure networks and the other being the collection of information about potential terrorists As a sign of this new emphasis on security since 2001 all major academic publishers have started technical journals focused on security and every major communications conference for example Globecom and ICC has organized workshops and sessions on security issues In addition the IEEE has created a technical committee on Communication and Information Security The first editor was intimately involved with security for the Athens Olympic Games of 2004
