

Both slow and rapid processes—from erosion to earthquakes—shape and reshape the Earth's surface.

Key Concept

Earth's surface is constantly changing.

National Standard

The surface of Earth changes. Some changes are due to slow processes, such as erosion and weathering, and some changes are due to rapid processes, such as landslides, volcanic eruptions, and earthquakes.

In this unit, students learn that the Earth's surface is shaped by slow processes—such as wind, water, and ice—and rapid processes—such as volcanic eruptions and earthquakes.
In this unit, students will learn the following:

- ➔ what created the Grand Canyon,
- ➔ how the movement of glaciers created different landforms,
- ➔ what happens when volcanoes erupt, and
- ➔ why earthquakes occur.

Teacher Background

Earth's surface is enormously varied and continuously changing. Mountains, valleys, islands, and icecaps are some of the features that make up our planet's landscape. These landforms are created and affected by earthquakes, volcanoes, wind, water, and ice.

The emergence of landforms is also related to processes occurring deep within Earth's crust. Earthquakes and volcanoes are the expressions of these processes. Active volcanoes and earthquakes are constantly at work, creating new features and destroying old ones.

Over millennia emerge, they are shaped and reshaped by forces of weather and erosion. Recognizable geographic features, such as the Grand Canyon, have created over millions of years of weathering and erosion.

For specific background information on each week's concepts, refer to the notes on pp. 66, 74, 80, and 86.

conceptualize knowledge integration in diverse ways For example it may be conceived as a specific coherence building learning process which involves not only acquiring but interrelating knowledge of different types e g theoretical and practical or from different domains which together constitute a teacher s or educational specialist s professional knowledge base e g content knowledge pedagogical knowledge pedagogical content knowledge knowledge about using technologies for learning and instruction etc Furthermore knowledge integration also refers to the meaningful application of knowledge of different types and from various domains in order to act professionally and to teach successfully In many countries however future teachers and educational specialists often struggle with knowledge integration because the task of integrating knowledge across domains from various courses and from practical training is left largely to the individuals Thus the efficacy and quality of higher education programs particularly in pre service teacher education could be improved through careful attention to knowledge integration International Perspectives on Knowledge Integration aims at facilitating the consideration of knowledge integration in teacher training and higher education in both research and practice Specifically it explores theoretical conceptions and methods and reports on original research and good practices for fostering knowledge integration It is thus of interest to researchers faculty board members and lecturers concerned with teacher training and higher education as well as to student teachers and students of pedagogy education and educational psychology CTET Paper-II
