

5. A clothing shop sells a particular brand of shirt, which comes in three different sizes, small, medium and large.

Each month the manager of the shop orders x small shirts, y medium shirts and z large shirts.

The manager forms constraints on the number of each size of shirts he will have to order.

One constraint is that for every 3 medium shirts he will order at least 5 large shirts.

- (a) Write down an inequality, with integer coefficients, to model this constraint. (2)

Two further constraints are

$$x + y + z \geq 250 \text{ and } x \leq 0.2(x + y + z)$$

- (b) Use these two constraints to write down statements, in context, that describe the number of different sizes of shirt the manager will order. (3)

The cost of each small shirt is £6, the cost of each medium shirt is £10 and the cost of each large shirt is £15.

The manager must minimise the total cost of all the shirts he will order.

- (c) Write down the objective function. (1)

Initially, the manager decides to order exactly 150 large shirts.

- (d) (i) Rewrite the constraints, as simplified inequalities with integer coefficients, in terms of x and y only.

- (ii) Represent these constraints on the feasible region R .
