Abstract
The purpose of this study was to investigate the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of elderly people. The study was conducted in a community center in Tehran, Iran. The participants were 30 elderly people (15 men and 15 women) aged 65 and above. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group participated in a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic exercises, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not participate in any training program. The physical health of the participants was measured using a series of tests, including a 6-minute walk test, a 30-second chair stand test, and a handgrip strength test. The psychological health of the participants was measured using a series of questionnaires, including the Geriatric Depression Scale (GDS), the Geriatric Anxiety Inventory (GAI), and the Geriatric Life Satisfaction Scale (GLSS). The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher scores on all physical and psychological health measures compared to the control group at the end of the 12-week training program. The findings of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical and psychological health of elderly people.
