Underground Spaces C. A. Brebbia, D. Kaliampakos, 2008 It is a strongly held belief that population growth and the demand for better accommodation and leisure facilities combined with a desire to improve the landscape will result in the need to develop more underground spaces This phenomenon which started in countries subjected to extreme climates is now becoming more widespread Underground spaces are being utilized for a wide diversity of needs They range from classical excavations to subway constructions underground sports halls power stations waste repositories underground cities and many others Their construction techniques are also varied from open air excavations to newly developed injection methods The response of the underground structures on the imposed loadings depends on a number of parameters that sometimes are too complex or not fully understood resulting in budget overruns or even failures that lead to loss of property or life Such uncertain cases need to be addressed and engineers should be able to accurately predict the construction s performance throughout its construction and service life The First International Conference on Underground Spaces discusses not only structural and environmental material characterization aspects but also the trends regarding the utilization of underground spaces This book contains papers presented at the Meeting and covers a wide range of topics including Use of underground space for industry Underground power stations Toxic and nuclear waste repositories Energy underground reservoirs Underground sewerage plants Waste storage and management Road and railway tunnels Utility tunnels Fire defence Defence against terrorist attacks

The Practice Turn in Architecture: Brussels after 1968 Isabelle Doucet, 2016-07-07 What makes a city What makes architecture And what is to be included in the discussions of architecture and the city Attempting to answer such ambitious questions this book starts from a city s specificity and complexity In response to recent debates in architectural theory around the agency and locus of critical action this book tests the potential of criticality through practice Rather than through conceptual and ideological categorisations it studies how architecture and criticality work within specific circumstances Brussels a complex city with a turbulent architectural and urban past forms a compelling case for examining the tensions between urban politics architectural imaginations society's needs and desires and the city's history and fabric Inspired by pragmatist relational philosophies this book tests the potential of criticality through practice It studies a series of critical actions and tools which occurred in Brussels architectural and urban culture after 1968 Weaved together Brussels architectural production emerges from a variety of actors including architects urban policy makers activists social workers and citizens but also architectural movements and ideologies urban renewal programs urban traumas plans and projects and mundane everyday practices and constructions This book contributes to the study of Brussels and offers a timely contribution to recent scholarship on the critical reappraisal of architectural debates from the 1960s through to the 1990s In addition by showing how pragmatist relational philosophies can be made relevant for architectural theory the book opens hopeful potentials for how architectural theory can better contribute to the formulation of a critical agenda for architecture

Critical Built Heritage Practice and Conservation Johnathan Djabarouti, 2024-01-23 Critical Built Heritage Practice and Conservation Evolving Perspectives supports an alternative point of departure for engaging with the historic built environment by critically questioning the legitimacy of dominant conservation concepts and methods that are often taken for granted within building conservation architecture and adaptive reuse The meaning of heritage is changing From pastness to presentness from preservation to participation and from tangible to intangible heritage is increasingly understood as a dynamic social and intangible process across many disciplines Consequently the role and remit of the built heritage practitioner and in particular the architectural conservationist is becoming progressively complex and in need of a critical gaze Is restoration really a falsehood from beginning to end Should the condition of existing materials determine the conservation method Is authenticity really an inherent quality within old buildings By engaging with a critical interpretation of heritage this book makes space for practitioners to consider the evolution of their own role within a rapidly changing context of built heritage practice Reinforced by a shift in emphasis from materials to meanings a socio material outlook is proposed which champions an enhanced focus on intangible heritage within the built heritage sector whilst still acknowledging the physical condition of old buildings is a priority for many stakeholders This book has been written with practitioners students and educators of architectural conservation in mind although will also be of relevance to the broader built heritage industry as well as academics researchers and heritage students with a passion for contemporary dialogues in heritage studies
