Dhingra,2024-07-02 Pablo Picasso once suggested that everyone begins life with an inherent artist s spirit The challenge lies in preserving this creative essence as we transition into adulthood Reflecting on the past it is evident how deeply intertwined creativity was in everyday life Women were the master creators knitting intricate sweaters tailoring clothes jewelry pieces and decoration items and crafting homemade edibles like pickles chutneys chips nachos and jams Their hands breathed life into their creations and their pride echoed in words I have made them Similarly men would mold wheels for carts among other things beaming with the same sense of accomplishment These everyday acts of creation brought them closer to their souls and ignited a distinct joy Fast forward to the present and this pleasure of creation seems to be dwindling The influx of ready made solutions has made human hands idle Our connection with the pure joy of creating something and its unique satisfaction is vanishing swiftly in this era of convenience However there is an urgent need for us to rekindle our bond with creativity Creativity mustn t be pursued as a profession but be embraced as a conduit for pure pleasure and self expression Engaging in activities that reconnect us with our core is essential allowing our souls to come alive Remarkably a flourishing creative spirit manifests a quiet mind and anger seems to recede It can be interpreted that anger is often an indication of unchanneled creative energy Let s remember the therapeutic power of creativity too Art Therapy has shown promising effects in alleviating symptoms related to pain and anxiety It s time we valued creativity as a hobby a therapeutic practice and a soulful journey that enriches our lives Let s keep the artist within us alive and thrive in the beautiful chaos of creation
