

Chapter 53: Population Ecology

- 53.1 Define a population and three characteristics of populations: density, dispersion, and demographics.*
- 53.2 Describe the exponential model of population growth and its key assumptions.*
- 53.3 Contrast the logistic and exponential models of population growth and define population carrying capacity.*
- 53.4 Define life history and explain how life history traits are products of natural selection.*
- 53.5 Contrast how density-dependent and density-independent factors affect population growth.*
- 53.6 Describe the historical and recent growth of the human population.*

The next three chapters on population, community, and ecosystem ecology provide the academic backbone for this unit on ecology. Each chapter considers a different organizational level in ecology, starting with population ecology. Before beginning your study of each chapter, be sure you have a clear understanding of the terms in the chapter title.

Study Tip: Graphs are used extensively to help explain concepts in population ecology, so make sure you pull all the information possible from the graphs you will encounter. Do not glance at the graphs, but carefully study them. Using Figure 53.1 in your text, list the two factors that increase population size and the two factors that reduce population size. Changes in populations over time tend to fall into three patterns. Do the graphs clearly indicate those patterns?

Concept 53.1 Biotic and abiotic factors affect population density, dispersion, and demographics*

LO 53.1 Define a population and three characteristics of populations: density, dispersion, and demographics.*

1. What determines a population?
2. What pieces of data are needed to mathematically determine population density?
3. Work through Figure 53.2 in your text to determine a population size using the Mark-Recapture Method. Do the math to make sure you get the same answer as the text. Note and understand what the letters of the formula mean. Next, try the following problem.

Population Ecology John H. Vandermeer, Deborah Esther Goldberg, 2003 How can the future number of deer agricultural pests or cod be calculated based on the present number of individuals and their age distribution How long will it take for a viral outbreak in a particular city to reach another city five hundred miles away In addressing such basic questions ecologists today are as likely to turn to complicated differential equations as to life histories a dramatic change from thirty years ago Population ecology is the mathematical backbone of ecology Here two leading experts provide the underlying quantitative concepts that all modern day ecologists need John Vandermeer and Deborah Goldberg show that populations are more than simply collections of individuals Complex variables such as the size distribution of individuals and allotted territory for expanding groups come into play when mathematical models are applied The authors build these models from the ground up from first principles using a much broader range of empirical examples from plants to animals from viruses to humans than do standard texts And they address several complicating issues such as age structured populations spatially distributed populations and metapopulations Beginning with a review of elementary principles the book goes on to consider theoretical issues involving life histories complications in the application of the core principles statistical descriptions of spatial aggregation of individuals and populations as well as population dynamic models incorporating spatial information and introductions to two species interactions Complemented by superb illustrations that further clarify the links between the mathematical models and biology Population Ecology is the most straightforward and authoritative overview of the field to date It will have broad appeal among undergraduates graduate students and practicing ecologists Resources in
