wound up in a collector's cabinet for Morton himself had collected hundreds of skulls over the course of a long career. Friends, diplomats, doctors, soldiers, and fellow naturalists sent him skulls they gathered from battlefields and burial grounds across America and around the world. With The Skull Collectors, eminent historian Ann Fabian resurrects that popular and scientific movement, telling the strange and at times gruesome story of Morton, his contemporaries, and their search for a scientific foundation for racial difference. From cranial measurements and museum shelves to heads on stakes, bloody battlefields, and the rascally pleasure of grave robbing, Fabian paints a lively picture of scientific inquiry in service of an agenda of racial superiority and of a society coming to grips with both the deadly implications of manifest destiny and the mass slaughter of the Civil War. Even as she vividly recreates the past, Fabian also deftly traces the continuing implications of this history, from lingering traces of scientific racism to debates over the return of the remains of Native Americans that are held by museums to this day. Full of anecdotes, oddities, and insights, The Skull Collectors takes readers on a darkly fascinating trip down a little visited but surprisingly important byway of American history. Cannibals and Converts Marett, 1983. Story of the Cook Islands immediately before the coming of Europeans, written by a Rarotongan missionary. An Introduction to Zooarchaeology Diane Gifford-Gonzalez, 2018-04-03. This volume is a comprehensive critical introduction to vertebrate zooarchaeology, the field that explores the history of human relations with animals from the Pliocene to the Industrial Revolution. The book is organized into five sections, each with an introduction that leads the reader systematically through this swiftly expanding field. Section One presents a general introduction to zooarchaeology, key definitions, and an historical survey of the emergence of zooarchaeology in the Americas, Europe, Asia, and Africa, and introduces the conceptual approach taken in the book. This volume is designed to allow readers to integrate data from the book along with that acquired elsewhere within a coherent analytical framework. Most of its chapters take the form of critical review articles, providing a portal into both the classic and current literature and contextualizing these with original commentary. Summaries of findings are enhanced by profuse illustrations by the author and others. What's New? Sander E. van der Leeuw, Robin Torrence, 2025-10-01. First published in 1989, What's New puts innovation firmly back on the agenda of archaeological interpretation. This book revives interest in the process of innovation and reinterprets it by drawing on original work done in a variety of disciplines. It demonstrates that the study of the components of innovation— invention, acceptance, and the context in which they occur—is essential if social change is to be better understood. The book contains detailed case studies that cover a broad geographical range in the prehistoric, historic, and modern world. It simulates and analyses the conditions of innovation and provides the necessary theoretical framework. The technologies involved are diverse: herding, fishing, pottery making, metalworking, and land management. Several important issues emerge from this diversity: it is the context of innovation that determines whether change will take place; within hierarchical societies, ideology can both stimulate and deny innovation; and the potential for innovation, experimentation, and change in traditional societies is systematically underrated.

by the Western world which is dominated by a narrow technological perspective The contributors also study innovation in social and applied anthropology industrial planning and the natural sciences What s New will provoke renewed discussion throughout the archaeological community about the process of innovation Anthropologists human geographers and other social scientists will find it fascinating because it provides a time dimension for the study of the conditions of human and social change
