

MELANIN

Melasma is a condition that causes brown or gray-brown patches on the face, particularly on the cheeks, forehead, and upper lip. It is more common in women and is often triggered by hormonal changes such as pregnancy or the use of birth control.

Overall, melasma affects a person's skin appearance. However, not everyone notices skin from the sun's rays or sunlight.

DIFFERENT TYPES

The skin is made of three layers: the epidermis, the dermis, and the hypodermis.

- Epidermis: The outermost layer of the skin, which provides protection.
- Dermis: The middle layer of the skin, which contains a variety of structures, including hair follicles, sweat glands, and blood vessels.
- Hypodermis: The innermost layer of the skin, which is composed of fat and connective tissue.

Different components of the skin are responsible for different functions. For example, the epidermis is responsible for protecting the body from the environment, while the dermis is responsible for regulating body temperature.

Research has shown that micro-needling could also be used to treat conditions such as pigment issues and acne. It is a popular choice for improving skin appearance.
