N.Y.M. Botchway, Awo Sarpong, Charles Quist-Adade, 2019-03-05 What does it mean to be a child in Africa In the detached Western media narratives of penury wickedness and death have dominated portrayals of African childhood The hegemonic lens of the West has failed to take into account the intricacies of not only what it means to be an African child in local and culturally specific contexts but also African childhood in general Challenging colonial discourses this edited volume guides the reader through different comprehensions and perspectives of childhood in Africa Using a blend of theory empiricism and history the contributors to this volume offer studies from a range of fields including African literature Afro centric psychology and sociology Importantly in its eclectic geographical coverage of Africa this book unashamedly presents the good the bad and the ugly of African childhood The resilience creativity pains and triumphs of African childhood are skilfully woven together to present the myriad of lived experiences and aspirations of children from across Africa As an important contribution to African childhood studies this book has the potential to be used by policymakers to shape sustain or change socio cultural economic and education systems that accommodate African childhood dynamics and experiences at different levels Stylistic Approaches to Nigerian Fiction D. Tunca, 2014-08-07 Drawing on the discipline of stylistics this book introduces a series of methodological tools and applies them to works by well known Nigerian writers including Abani Adichie and Okri In doing so it demonstrates how attention to form fosters understanding of content in their work as well as in African and postcolonial literatures more widely The Paradox(es) of Diasporic Identity, Race and Belonging Benjamin Maiangwa, 2023-10-22 This book explores how questions about home and belonging have been framed in the discourses on race migration and social relationships It does this with the aim of envisioning alternative modes of living and reimagining our political communities in ways that question the legacy of colonization and constructed identities which detract from our sense of obligation to each other and the planet The book questions problematic categories of difference to transform human relations beyond the materialism of our global political economy Questions addressed in the volume include In what ways are combative colonial identities of difference manufactured within our national and global spaces of encounter How can we expel the racialized and tribalized political identities that seek to purify and deny the complexities and sacredness of being human How do we embrace the notion that everyone we encounter is a mirror reflecting our fears of suffering and our desires for happiness The book is set in the context of re emerging ultra nationalists and anti migrant politicians on the national and international stage advancing various strands of extreme right and protectionist ideology couched as redemptive welfarist strategies The adverse impacts of these strategies seem to be reifying a possessive idea of citizenship and identity engendering a national fantasy that portrays communities as homogenous entities inhabiting enclosed borders This is essentially a compendium of conversations across the intersection of the racial national ethnic spiritual and sexual boundaries in which we live

The People's Right to the Novel Eleni Coundouriotis, 2014-09-15 This study offers a literary history of the war novel in Africa Coundouriotis argues that this genre aimed more specifically at African readers than the continent's better known bildungsroman tradition nevertheless makes an important intervention in global understandings of human rights The African war novel lies at the convergence of two sensibilities it encounters in European traditions the naturalist aesthetic and the discourse of humanitarianism whether in the form of sentimentalism or of human rights law Both these sensibilities are present in culturally hybrid forms in the African war novel reflecting its syncretism as a narrative practice engaged with the colonial and postcolonial history of the continent The war novel Coundouriotis argues stakes claims to collective rights that contrast with the individualism of the bildungsroman tradition The genre is a form of people's history that participates in a political struggle for the rights of the dispossessed Legilimens! Bell, 2014-01-03 The current state of scholarship surrounding Harry Potter is both vibrant and varied One of the reasons scholars continue to be attracted to the series as an artifact is the colossal range of disciplinary foci that can find treasures to unearth in its pages and films In the Harry Potter series legilimens is the spell that allows a wizard to see into another person's mind reading the subject's thoughts As such it is an appropriate moniker for the attempt of scholars to see into the Harry Potter texts and search for greater meaning Legilimens Perspectives in Harry Potter Studies contains the work of anthropologists and theologians of historians and rhetoricians The collection is a wide ranging discussion of the Harry Potter texts and the meanings contained within among scholars from broadly disparate fields coming together to deliberate over the greater scholarly significance of these rich and fertile texts

Narrating Human Rights in Africa Eleni Coundouriotis, 2020-12-13 Narrating Human Rights in Africa claims human rights from the perspective of artists from the African continent and situates the key theoretical concepts in African perspectives undercutting the stereotypes of victimhood and voicelessness Instead of positioning literary texts as illustrative of points already theorized elsewhere the author foregrounds the literature itself to show the concepts it offers the ideas and responses stemming from complex historical circumstances in Africa and expressed by African writers The book focuses on how narrative creates new categories of thought challenging human rights dogma whereas the sum of the literary voices evoked also stands by the values of social justice and protection of human rights The chapters take up key challenges to the narration of human rights in which the contribution of African writers is particularly important This includes human dignity in the resistance to apartheid the figure of the child soldier how humanitarianism's images affect representational strategies of contemporary African writers the challenge of testifying about rape in war how to evoke the disappeared body of the torture victim the centrality of flight in the refugee and migrant experiences and finally the long shadow of the heart of darkness motif Offering a sustained examination of the narrative treatment of key human rights concerns as expressed by African writers this book will be of interest to scholars of African literature postcolonial studies African studies and human rights
