Society Rules Julian Fellowes, 2016-07-05 The English of all classes as it happens are addicted to exclusivity Leave three Englishmen in a room and they will invent a rule that prevents a fourth joining them In Snobs Charles heir to the Marquess of Uckfield is one of the most eligible young aristocrats in England at least according to the gossip columns And when he proposes to Edith Lavery the blonde haired blue eyed daughter of a moderately successful accountant and social climbing mother she accepts But is she really in love with Charles Or with his title position and all its accompanying advantages In Past Imperfect our narrator is summoned to the deathbed of the extravagantly wealthy Damian Baxter a friend turned enemy from their raucous Cambridge days who begs his old acquaintance for help tracking down the author of an anonymous letter claiming Baxter as the father of her child The search takes the narrator back to the extraordinary world of swinging London where aristocratic parents schemed to find suitable matches for their daughters while someone snuck hash into the brownies at a ball at Madame Tussaud's It was a time when everything seemed to be changing and not always quite as expected These two irresistible novels immerse us in a contemporary England governed by

The Commonplace Book Elizabeth Smither, 2013-10-01

I read this on a sandwich board outside a coffee shop I stopped pulled out my notebook and leaned against a shopfront You're nothing but a piece of crockery and a bit of blood Epictetus How sharp and bloodtinglingly lovely on a clear early autumn day The sun sharp on the shop panes clear shadows on the footpaths faces outlined in a way they are not in summer Necks with knotted scarves half coats Last year's shoes dusted and polished I was impervious to the glances I got as I wrote down the words perhaps I was mistaken for a reporter Heaven forbid it should be a poet But that harshness in Epictetus the Stoic how lovely A bit of railway cup a train has run over A bit of blood that has gone brown perhaps from a nosebleed during a high fever I put the notebook back in my purse and walked on rejoicing Elizabeth Smither has always kept her own collection of other people's words quotations extracts poems and pens she's found and overheard In The Commonplace Book she shares these witty and wise quotations with us interspersed with incidents and memories from her own writing and life offering a sparkling glimpse into the influences and inspirations of a far from commonplace writer
