Burying the Past Nigel Biggar, 2003-05-22 No one can deny how September 11 2001 has altered our understandings of Peace and Justice and Civil Conflict Those have become words with startling new life in our vocabularies Yet making peace and doing justice must remain challenges that are among the highest callings of humanity especially in a terror heightened world Nigel Biggar Christian ethicist and editor of this now more than ever must read Choice volume newly expanded and updated addresses head on the concept of a redemptive burying of the past urging that the events of that infamous date be approached as a transnational model of conflict and suggesting wisely and calmly that justice can be even the better understood if we should undertake the very important task of locating the sources of hostility valid or not toward the West Burying the Past asks these important questions How do newly democratic nations put to rest the conflicts of the past Is granting forgiveness a politically viable choice for those in power Should justice be restorative or retributive Beginning with a conceptual approach to justice and forgiveness and moving to an examination of reconciliation on the political and on the psychological level the collection examines the quality of peace as it has been forged in the civil conflicts in Rwanda South Africa Chile Guatemala and Northern Ireland There are times in history when making peace and doing justice seem almost impossible in the face of horrendous events Those responses are understandably human But it is in times just like these when humanity can and must rise to its possibilities and to its higher purposes in order to continue considering itself just and humane

Postcolonial Literatures of Climate Change investigates the evolving nature of postcolonial literary criticism in response to global regional and local environmental transformations brought about by climate change. Helen Gilbert Royal Holloway University of London. The subject is topical and vital and will become even more so as the problem of how to reconcile the demands of climate change with the effects on regions and individual nations already damaged by the economic effects of colonisation and the subsequent inequalities resulting from neo colonialism continues to grow.
