first permanent resident of Chicago Planning as Persuasive Storytelling James A. Throgmorton, 1996-07 Planning as Persuasive Storytelling is a revealing look at the world of political conflict surrounding the Commonwealth Edison Company's ambitious nuclear power plant construction program in northern Illinois during the 1980s Examining the clash between the utility consumer groups community based groups the Illinois Commerce Commission and the City of Chicago Throgmorton argues that planning can best be thought of as a form of persuasive storytelling A planner's task is to write future oriented texts that employ language and figures of speech designed to construct constituencies that the planner's vision is both desirable and feasible Though seeking to persuade the planner must also remain open to transformation through honest engagement with contending stories Juxtaposing stories about efforts to construct Chicago's electric future Planning as Persuasive Storytelling suggests a shift in how we think about planning In order to account for the fragmented and conflicted nature of contemporary American life and politics that shift would be away from science and the experts and toward persuasive storytelling by diverse authors P 4 of cover The Papers of Thomas A. Platt, 1991-04-09 Describes consumers shifting habits of fuel consumption tracing how use of wood led to burning coal and coal gas to the arrival to the arrival of the arc lamp and then the coming of electricity Shows that the city government and utility brokers faced two problems how to generate a cheap supply of electricity and how to sell electrical energy to people who were already enjoying gas services The solutions were found by Samuel Insull president of Commonwealth Edison Company who put electrical technology on a sound economic footing

The 1933 Chicago World's Fair Cheryl Ganz, 2008-09-24 Chicago's 1933 world's fair set a new direction for international expositions Earlier fairs had exhibited technological advances but Chicago's fair organizers used the very idea of progress to buoy national optimism during the Depression's darkest years Orchestrated by business leaders and engineers almost all former military men the fair reflected a business military engineering model that envisioned a promising future through science and technology's application to everyday life. But not everyone at Chicago's 1933 exposition had abandoned notions of progress that entailed social justice and equality, recognition of ethnicity and gender, and personal freedom and expression. The fair's motto "Science Finds, Industry Applies, Man Conforms" was challenged by iconoclasts such as Sally Rand, whose provocative fan dance became a persistent symbol of the fair, as well as a handful of other exceptional individuals including African Americans, ethnic populations, and foreign nationals, groups of working women, and even well-heeled socialites. Cheryl R. Ganz offers the stories of fair planners and participants who showcased education, industry, and entertainment to sell optimism during the depths of the Great Depression. This engaging history also features eighty-six photographs, nearly half of which are full color, of key locations, exhibits, and people, as well as authentic ticket stubs, postcards, pamphlets, posters, and other items.

Planning Ethics Sue Hendler, 2018-04-17 Over the past fifty years, professional understanding of planning has changed markedly. In the past, planning was primarily described as a technical activity involving data collection, analysis, and synthesis of physical plans and supporting policies. Now, planning is seen as a much broader set of human activities encompassing the physical world and also the realm of public and social services. Not surprisingly, planners' discussions of ethics have evolved. Professional ethics is regarded by many planners to be limited to a set of rules of behavior regarding interactions with the public, sources of data, government officials, and one another. This shift is symbolized by the evolution of the labels by which ethics is known, from a circumscribed view of professional ethics to a broader concept of ethics in planning, both of which are discussed in this book. Sue Hendler argues that planners recognize that every act of planning pursues certain human values and is a series of statements about what we take to be right or wrong and what we take to represent the highest priorities of the society. Planning Ethics explores planning within alternative moral theories, including liberalism, communitarianism, environmentalism, and feminism. The contributors illustrate the application of these ethical principles in specific planning contexts encompassing community development, land conversion, waste management, electric power, planning, and education. This is the next generation of thinking on ethics and planning. It will be a centerpiece of every planning curriculum.

The Power Makers Maury Klein, 2010-09-01 Maury Klein is one of America's most acclaimed historians of business and society.
