Alarm In De Woestijn:

Running the Sahara Marcel Nickler, 2021-09-02 Running the Sahara is more than my experience of participating in the Marathon des Sables 2017 Though much of the book is about my time in the desert and I talk about my preparation and the equipment I used the book is also profoundly personal I tried my best to explore my passion for running and life I hope the reader finds it entertaining and inspiring to follow me from meeting Herr Hammermann during my first marathon to my finish of the nearly 250 kilometer race in the Moroccan Sahara It is a book about the gift of life so there are some disappointments and moments of despair but there are also triumphs and the sublime I believe when dreams close other dreams open and that by setting goals and being disciplined all of us can shift the balance and get to where we want to be What started as a book about the Marathon des Sables turned into the story of my life Ambassador 1A: The Sahara Conspiracy Patty Jansen, 2016-01-01 Second book in the series Read Ambassador 1 Seeing Red first 3 December 2114 Cory Wilson is woken in the middle of the night with a summons to appear in the president of Nations of Earth's office An aid worker in Djibouti has discovered a shipment of alien guns As ambassador to Gamra the extraterrestrial organisation which controls the Exchange the FTL wormhole network Cory has often been critical of Earth's handling of extraterrestrial problems This is his moment to shine to apply his knowledge about alien customs to in the words of the president get those idiots out of there Except the usual suspects the Zhori mafia who have caused trouble on Earth for a long time are nowhere to be seen This is something far more dangerous something that involves all of northern Africa something that provokes the anger of Asto Gamra's largest world Asto's army is already prowling in orbit ready to strike A science fiction thriller that will appeal to readers of C J Cherryh's science fiction Lois McMaster Bujold's Miles series Lindsay Buroker Alastair Reynolds and Ann Leckie Death in the Sahara Michael Asher, 2008-05-17 Desert explorer Michael Asher investigates the most disastrous exploration mission in the history of the Sahara In 1880 the French government ordered a surveying expedition for a railway that would bring the fabulous wealth of Timbuktu in French Sudan to Paris This trek should have heralded a new era of French prosperity Instead it was a deadly fiasco Under armed in hostile territory and foolishly employing the enemy as guides the one hundred men of the expedition were ambushed and stranded without camels or supplies in the deserts of southern Algeria Many were killed outright and for four months the survivors were menaced by the Tuareg the lords of the desert robbed starved and tricked into eating poisoned fruit To escape the men hid in the wastelands of the Sahara with little hope of finding food or water They were finally forced to eat their own dead or worse the merely weak Only a dozen malnourished men lived to tell their tale The story of their 1 000 mile journey is one of the most astonishing narratives of survival ever recorded With a superb grip of narrative and uncanny ability to evoke battle scenes The Guardian Michael Asher has written an amazing true story that is as dramatic as it is frightening Skyhorse Publishing as well as our Arcade imprint are proud to publish a broad range of books for readers interested in history books about World War II the

Zoraida: A Romance of the Harem and the Great Sahara William le Queux, 2020-09-28 The adventure was strange the mystery inexplicable A blazing noontide in the month of Moharram Away across the barren desert to the distant horizon nothing met the aching eye but a dreary waste of burning red brown sand under a cloudless sky shining like burnished copper Not an object relieved the wearying monotony of the waterless region forsaken by nature not a palm not a rock not a knoll not a vestige of herbage nothing but the boundless silent expanse of that wild and wonderful wilderness the Great Sahara across which the sand laden wind swept ever and anon in short stifling gusts hot as the breath from an oven Far beyond the Atlas mountains under the fiery rays of the African sun I was riding with all speed in order to overtake a caravan which I had been informed by the cadì at Wargla had started for Noum en Nas the small town in the Touat Oasis two days before my arrival The caravan I learned was composed of camels therefore mounted as I was on a fleet Arab stallion and guiding myself by my pocket compass and the very inadequate map of the D p t de la Guerre I expected to come upon them ere two suns had set Four long breathless days had now passed yet I could detect no living thing In the far south of Algeria the intense dry heat of summer always affects Europeans and although clad lightly in haïck and burnouse with my feet thrust into rough slippers I was no exception Alone in that trackless arid desert with my food and water nearly consumed and my brain aflame with fever I was bound to admit my position decidedly unenviable I was afflicted by a hundred miseries Into my face the glaring noonday heat was reflected by the sand I was hungry my throat was parched

the racking pain of fatigue cramped my bones and my horse weary and jaded stumbled now and then as he plodded slowly onward under the fierce pitiless rays The two Chasseurs d Afrique who had been sent with me for protection by my friend the General of Division had foolishly partaken of melons soon after leaving Tuggurt and had been stricken down with illness in consequence therefore I had been compelled to set out upon my journey into the Areg alone Suddenly about an hour after noon my eager eyes were rewarded by a sight in the far distance of a cloud of dust Spurring my horse I galloped onward and in half an hour the bells of the camels and the jingle of the horses trappings fell upon my ears The dense whirling cloud of sand preceded the cavalcade and whenever a gust of wind parted it slow plodding camels heavily laden with merchandise glittering arms and flowing scarlet and white burnouses could be seen In this way the caravan presented itself as I pressed on towards its flank Within fifty paces of the vanguard I dug my heels into the horse s sides and bounded across to the head of the convoy of a dozen Spahis A solitary rider journeying across the desert is such an unusual spectacle that the ferocious looking advance guard fearing attack shouted and lowered their rifles
