Sachsman, 2021-08-04 Communicating Endangered Species Extinction News and Public Policy is a multidisciplinary environmental communication book that takes a distinctive approach by connecting how media and culture depict and explain endangered species with how policymakers and natural resource managers can or do respond to these challenges in practical terms Extinction isn't new However the pace of extinction is accelerating globally The International Union for Conservation of Nature classifies more than 26 000 species as threatened The causes are many including climate change overdevelopment human exploitation disease overhunting habitat destruction and predators The willingness and the ability of ordinary people governments scientists nongovernmental organizations and businesses to slow this deeply disturbing acceleration are uncertain Meanwhile researchers around the world are laboring to better understand and communicate the possibility and implications of extinctions and to discover effective tools and public policies to combat the threats to species survival This book presents a history of news coverage of endangered species around the world examining how and why journalists and other communicators wrote what they did how attitudes have changed and why they have changed It draws on the latest research by chapter authors who are a mix of social scientists communication experts and natural scientists Each chapter includes a mass media and or cultural aspect This book will be essential reading for students natural resource managers government officials environmental activists and academics interested in conservation and biodiversity environmental communication and journalism and public policy The Edge of Extinction Claire Craig, Sharon Dalglish, Ian Rohr, 2003 How do species of animals disappear from the face of the earth Find out about those already gone those in danger now and some that have been saved from extinction Animals in Peril John Arthur Hoyt, 1994 Argues that the theory that endangered species must pay their own way to survive is a political expediency used to justify legalized killing in the name of conservation
