Social Structures, Aging, and Self-Regulation in the Elderly K. Warner Schaie, PhD, Laura L. Carstensen, PhD, 2006-07-06

This collection considers ways in which societal contexts influence aging by influencing self regulatory processes No one doubts that the social contexts in which individuals develop exert strong influence on life trajectories Those born into environments that provide high quality education supportive social relations and economic assets do better in old age than those born into environments bereft of such resources The extent of this influence however is only beginning to be revealed Recent research shows that life experiences influence basic brain structures e g the effect of musical training on neural organization and functions e g inflammatory processes and that social embeddedness may even protect against Alzheimer s disease Similarly education increasingly appears to have a real effect on neural integrity Thus societal contexts may not simply open or close doors for individuals but may influence self regulatory processes at the most basic levels of functioning Although social structures are generally seen as the independent variables that affect individual aging it is also possible to think of a lifetime development of self regulatory processes leading to behaviors in old age that can have impact on and modify societal structures Two parts of this book consider self regulation as the dependent variable asking how social contexts influence cognitive emotional and self regulatory processes The third part reverses the question treating self regulation as the independent variable and retirement and physical health as dependent variables In this part consideration is given to how the effectiveness of self regulation influences physical and economic outcomes in old age Social

Structures K. Warner Schaie, Peter Uhlenberg, 2007-03-23 Significant demographic changes are altering the structure of the American population Larger numbers of immigrants are entering the work force will become part of our aging population and increasingly are providing care for the elderly Family structures and communities are evolving as marriage childbearing divorce and cohabitation trends are changing The working population that supports the elderly physically and economically is also changing and will most likely become smaller and less able to support this growing population What does this mean for the well being of our aging population and our efforts to ensure the quality of life for our elderly now and that we will want to enjoy ourselves as we become part of this older population In this volume Drs Schaie and Uhlenberg and a host of leading scholars look at the current structure of the American population in an effort to determine the impact it will have on the lives of the elderly and those growing older with disabilities and chronic illness They examine the effects of the aging baby boomers on health care migration and immigration and how it can support or tax health care networks cultural issues regarding access to health care and changing cultural attitudes towards marriage and family that are affecting the relationships between the elderly and their communities University-Community Engagement in the Asia Pacific
