The authors also have proposed an alternative to the adult population as the true representative. They suggest that even though young people are not the best indicator of the population, they are the best indicator of the future. They are used to show the future potential of consumers and their preferences. They also will represent the young consumers in the future.

1 The authors are grateful to persons who have through thoughtful comments and their thoughtful questions, to George B. (G.B.) Harrison, Jr. for his critical and thoughtful comments and also, and particularly helpful comments on earlier drafts.
