Points-to-edges problem is reduced to graph vertex cover, and therefore fixed size set implies the following: there exists no fixed value implying the NP-hardness of the problem.

- a. The water remains hot and so it can use the water heater.
- b. Before being used, water has to travel some distance through the pipes, so the water closer to the heater is warmer than the rest.
- c. It takes time for the water to travel the distance up to the water heater during circulation, so the water closer to the water heater will be warmer than the rest.
- d. Water near the water heater is being heated, and the water further away is being cooled. Therefore, the water closer to the heater is warmer than the water further away.
- e. The water near the heater is being heated, so it is warmer than the water further away.
