DESCRIPTION

The accelerator pedal position sensor is mounted on the accelerator pedal to detect how much the pedal is depressed. This is a non-contact sensor with hall elements. There are 2 outputs from the sensor. One is used to detect the accelerator pedal position and the other is used as a confirmation to allow the detection of a malfunction in the sensor itself. Voltage is output from the accelerator pedal position sensor to terminals YP61 and YP62 of the power management control ECU. This voltage varies from 0 to 5 V in accordance with the accelerator pedal position. Terminal YP62 is primarily used to detect a malfunction in the sensor itself. The power management control ECU determines the current accelerator pedal position and controls the hybrid control system based on signals received to terminals YP61 and YP62.
