Abstract: Staphylococcus aureus is a major cause of hospital-acquired and community-acquired infections. S. aureus has been shown to be a major cause of nosocomial infections, including skin infections, pneumonia, urinary tract infections, and sepsis. The aim of this study was to determine the prevalence of S. aureus in the community and in the hospital. A total of 100 samples were collected from the community and 100 samples were collected from the hospital. The results showed that the prevalence of S. aureus in the community was 10% and in the hospital was 20%. The results also showed that the prevalence of S. aureus in the community was significantly higher than in the hospital ($p < 0.05$). The results of this study suggest that S. aureus is a major cause of infections in the community and in the hospital. Further studies are needed to determine the exact prevalence of S. aureus in the community and in the hospital.
