both civil law and common law systems and researchers in linguistics and language issues Among the many relevant matters they discuss are the following terminologies of rights and remedies the role of the European Court of Justice as interpreter multilingualism in parliamentary practice the role of the European Commissions legal revisers and translation at the European Court of Justice The essays were originally presented as papers at a conference held in Como in April 2005 organised by the Faculty of Law of the University of Insubria together with the Centro Interuniversitario di Ricerca in Diritto Comparato Interuniversity Centre for Research in Comparative Law set up by the Universities of Milan Bologna and Insubria This event took place in the context of a research project co financed by the University of Insubria and the Italian Ministry of Education University and Research The particular objective of the conference was to make a comparison between the day to day working requirements within the Community institutions each with its own particular needs and the longer term analysis which the academic world could bring to bear on the problems of the translatability of legal terms As the first in depth appraisal of this crucial matter this book cannot fail to find interested readers among all the branches of European law practitioners and scholars local and international It is sure to be a highly valuable resource for many years to come
