Homemaking for the Apocalypse Jill Anderson, 2021-04-20 In Homemaking for the Apocalypse Jill E

Anderson interrogates patterns of Atomic Age conformity that controlled the domestic practices and private activities of Americans. Used as a way to promote security in a period rife with anxieties about nuclear annihilation and The Bomb, these narratives of domesticity were governed by ideals of compulsory normativity and their circulation upheld the wholesale idealization of homemaking within a white middle class nuclear family and all that came along with it: unchecked reproduction, constant consumerism, and a general policing of practices deemed contradictory to normative American life. Homemaking for the apocalypse seeks out the disruptions to the domestic ideals found in memoirs, Civil Defense literature, the fallout shelter debate, horror films, comics, and science fiction, engaging in elements of horror in order to expose how closely domestic practices are tied to dread and anxiety. Homemaking for the Apocalypse offers a narrative of the Atomic Age that calls into question popular memory's acceptance of the conformity thesis and proposes new methods for critiquing the domestic imperative of the period by acknowledging its deep tie to horror.

Office of Education, Florence Fallgatter, 1936. Space and Equipment for Homemaking Instruction, United States. Office of Education, 1936. Resources in Education, 1988. A Manual of Home-Making (Classic Reprint), Van Rensselaer, 2017-12-26. Excerpt from A Manual of Home Making. Herein is brought together a collection of precepts and advice on the setting up and management of a home. The book is written and compiled primarily for those women who are managing households, not for those who are teaching or who are students in the classroom. It has been the purpose to bring together from many reliable sources the guiding rules to be followed in making the home a place where the family can live a thrifty and joyous life. It is compiled by those who understand the subject and the situation. Chapters on hygiene and sanitation were prepared by the authors but space would not allow of their inclusion. This is a source of much regret but the omission allowed a fuller treatment to be retained in the remaining chapters. The book is intended primarily for rural conditions. The country home should receive as careful and considerate attention as the farm itself. The home is inseparable from the farm. Yet as the principles and practices of home making are the same in country and town, the book should actually meet the needs of a wide range of people. The Editor is glad to add a book in his series on the work and welfare of women and he hopes it will not be the last. The woman's work and the man's work together make the welfare of any people secure. About the Publisher: Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
