a survey of the objects of human knowledge that they are either IDEAS actually imprinted on the senses or else such as are perceived by attending to the passions and operations of the mind or lastly ideas formed by help of memory and imagination either compounding dividing or barely representing those originally perceived in the aforesaid ways By sight I have the ideas of light and colours with their several degrees and variations By touch I perceive hard and soft heat and cold motion and resistance and of all these more and less either as to quantity or degree Smelling furnishes me with odours the palate with tastes and hearing conveys sounds to the mind in all their variety of tone and composition And as several of these are observed to accompany each other they come to be marked by one name and so to be reputed as one thing Thus for example a certain colour taste smell figure and consistence having been observed to go together are accounted one distinct thing signified by the name APPLE Other collections of ideas constitute a stone a tree a book and the like sensible things which as they are pleasing or disagreeable excite the passions of love hatred joy grief and so forth

George Berkeley's investigation of human epistemology remains one of the most respected of its time this edition contains the treatise in full complete with the author's preface One of Berkeley's most important beliefs was that of immaterialism The meaning being that nothing material exists unless it is perceived by something or someone Distinct from solipsism the belief that only the self exists Berkeley's view is that material items are ideas formed by distinct conscious minds the concept of reality being simply the summation of shared ideas rather than physical objects fascinated philosophers of the era Much of Berkeley's philosophy is framed by then new discoveries in the field of physics The concepts of color and light thus have a frequent bearing on the overall thesis disagreeing with Isaac Newton on the subject of space it was later that Berkeley's contrarian opinions on matters such as calculus and free thinking gained him further renown Like Newton George Berkeley was a deeply religious man the nature of reality and whether scientific study could be reconciled with religious beliefs in the divine was a lifelong preoccupation Upon its initial release A Treatise Concerning the Principles of Human Knowledge was received and sold poorly However Berkeley rewrote it as a dialogue between three participants This proved more popular than the essay form and cemented the notion of immaterialism in the intellectual community during the early 18th century
