

A Lucky Life Interrupted

It was what our eldest daughter, an emergency room physician, had worried about. "Dad," she would say, "we've never had anything go really wrong in our family. I wonder if we could handle it." We were about to find out.

My primary care physician thought we should do a blood check. I repeated what was to become a familiar mantra: my name and date of birth, so the nurses and technicians would know they had the right patient:
