more languages are part of a child's world we are presented with a rich opportunity to learn something about language in general and about how the mind works. In this book Norbert Francis examines the development of bilingual proficiency and the different kinds of competence that come together in making up its component parts. In particular he explores problems of language ability when children use two languages for tasks related to schooling especially in learning how to read and write. He considers both broader research issues and findings from an ongoing investigation of child bilingualism in an indigenous language speaking community in Mexico. This special sociolinguistic context allows for a unique perspective on some of the central themes of bilingualism research today including the distinction between competence and proficiency, modularity and the Poverty of Stimulus problem. Francis proposes that competence knowledge should be considered as an integral component of proficiency ability rather than something separate and apart, arguing that this approach allows for a more inclusive assessment of research findings from diverse fields of study. The bilingual indigenous language project illustrates how the concepts of modularity and the competence/proficiency distinction in particular might be applied to problems of language learning and literacy. Few investigations of indigenous language and culture approach bilingual research problems from a cognitive science perspective. By suggesting connections to broader cognitive and linguistic issues, Francis points the way to further research along these lines.

Teaching with the Common Core Standards for English Language Arts, Grades 3-5 Lesley Mandel Morrow, Karen K. Wixson, Timothy Shanahan, 2012-12-06. The Common Core State Standards (CCSS) are the first academic standards to be independently adopted by almost every state in the country. The purpose and intent of the Common Core standards for English Language Arts (ELA) as well as Literacy in History, Social Studies, and Science education are the focus of this book. This volume is aimed at educators, administrators, graduate students, university professors, and others who deal with students in grades 3 through 5. Each of the chapters addresses one of the major English Language Arts domains: literature, informational texts, foundational skills, writing, speaking and listening, language technology, and assessment. They contain invaluable information, insight, and research from literacy leaders in their respective fields. Their objective is twofold: to provide a theoretical background and detailed explanation of each of the CCSS ELA standards as well as practical suggestions, classroom vignettes, models, instructional resources, and unit ideas to implement the standards.

Literacy, Language and Learning: The Nature and Consequences of Reading and Writing David R. Olson, Nancy Torrance, Angela Hildyard, 1985-04-26. Literacy is an important concern of contemporary societies. This book offers a comprehensive survey of recent efforts to understand the nature of written language and its role in cognition and in social and intellectual life. The authors represent a wide range of disciplines: cognitive psychology, linguistics, anthropology, sociology, education, history, and philosophy, and address a wide range of questions. Is literacy a decisive factor in historical and cultural change? Does it alter the mental and social lives of individuals? If so, how and via what mechanisms? Does learning to read and write change children's speech, thought, or orientation to language? What are children and adults learning when they acquire
