Although steam engines were seldom used for everyday train transportation by 1960 they live on in the minds of those fortunate enough to have experienced them and in the many museums and steam powered excursions throughout the country. They are especially active in the West where master photographer Joel Jensen has for more than twenty five years documented these well restored and maintained veterans in their natural settings doing what they used to hauling both passengers and freight and delighting rail fans of all ages. This timeless collection takes us back to the end of the nineteenth century and the first half of the twentieth with captivating images evoking the past. Essays by John Gruber the president of the Center for Railroad Photography and Scott Lothes the project director for the center help to put these wonderful photographs in context. The Steam Railway Colin P. Walker, London (England). Museum of British Transport, 1968

Requiem for Steam David Plowden, 2010-09-21 Stunning photographs by a master photographer documenting the last of the steam locomotives. As a child David Plowden was given a box camera and before long he began to photograph railroad trains. As he matured and started on what would become a lifetime in photography trains specifically steam locomotives became one of his passions and then they were eclipsed by modern diesel locomotives. It is our good fortune that Plowden was on the scene at the end documenting what would become this book his reverent tribute to the steam era. In Search of Steam Keith Strickland, 2012 More than 200 outstanding photos of steam around the world. Since the 1970s Keith Strickland has traveled the world in search of steam camera in hand and in this outstanding book he has gathered together his finest images which show the contrasting style of steam travel today in Europe Africa China Cuba India and beyond. This unique look at steam around the globe presents the reader with fascinating insights into the locos in action stations passengers industry and the daily lives of those who make a living beside the tracks. These superb photographs capture the heady atmosphere of steam railways and the sheer pleasure of trains as a means of travel. It is a book that will appeal as much to the armchair and traveling tourist as to those with a passion for steam. In his capacity as an active worker for the charity The Railway Children Keith Strickland is donating all his proceeds from this book to them to improve the lives of children in the Third World who have made railway stations their impromptu homes.
