

The Effects of Female Teacher Perceptions of Mathematics on the Quality of Teaching at The Basic School Level

Abstract

This study explored the influence of perceptions of Female Mathematics Teachers (FMTs) on their preparation, presentation and output of lessons delivered. Using a descriptive survey, 20 mixed primary schools were randomly selected for the study. Also, 11 Junior High Schools (JHSs) with Female Mathematics Teachers (FMTs) were purposively selected to participate in the study. All FMTs from the 31 basic schools selected were included in the study. The analysis of the data was based on percentage computations of responses from a questionnaire that was administered. The frequency of rejection or acceptance of items to a large extent represented the perceptions of FMTs in basic schools about their competence in lesson preparation and presentation. The findings show that FMTs at the primary and the JHS levels have very high confidence in themselves and felt they were equally as competent as their male colleagues. This fact notwithstanding, female teachers, teaching beyond the primary schools tend to avoid teaching mathematics. This is evident from the proportion of FMTs at the JHS and beyond in Ghana. The study recommends motivation, in-service training and scholarships for FMTs so as to equip more females to be able to teach Mathematics effectively at the basic level in Ghana.

1. Introduction

Teachers in public primary schools in Ghana adopt multiple subject teaching, whereby a teacher teaches all the subjects taught in the class or teaches more than one subject. By this arrangement, public primary school teachers in Ghana teach mathematics as well. According to the data from Ghana Education Service (2018), the proportion of female to male trained teachers at the basic school in Ghana was 45.8% female and 54.2% male for primary school whilst at the JHS 30.3% were females and 69.7% males. The proportion for the Northern Region of the country is 26% female and 74% male for primary and 19.2% female and 81.8% male for JHS. This is an improvement in the gender proportions compared to the records for 2015/2016 academic year which was 46.6% female and 53.4% male for primary and 30.5% female whilst 69.5% are male for JHS. This improvement in the proportion of female teachers means a lot in mathematics teaching in Ghanaian primary schools since all these female primary school teachers teach numeracy, arithmetic or mathematics.

Thompson and Asare-Danso (2016) enumerates that the preoccupation of the constructivist teacher, as they term it, is to motivate young learners to indulge or engage in activities that would sustain their interest in concepts being learned. The teacher is thus expected to adopt attitudes and practices that would engage young learners in practical tasks. After pupils have successfully engaged in these tasks, teachers are expected to adopt appropriate assessment skills to probe the level of success of the task and concepts learned. Basic school mathematics teachers are expected to exhibit these skills in order to build the requisite mathematics foundation for pupils. These professional practices required of teachers and the expected output from pupils especially in mathematics is not what the records of BECE and WASSCE show, as year on year achievements relative to other BECE and WASSCE subjects are poorer for mathematics.

Several interventions have been implemented over the years by both the Ghanaian government and non-governmental organisations to improve on achievement in mathematics and science at the basic level of education through practical or pupil-centred approaches. Some of these interventions by non-governmental organisations are; GES-JICA STM project (2002-2007), IBIS-ACE community teacher volunteer project (2012), UTTDBE programme (2005-2012), USAID e-learning project among others. All these projects were implemented in the Northern Region as well as other parts of the country.

The core areas of the mathematics curriculum at the basic level include numeracy, shape and space, algebra and data collection and handling. The GES Basic school syllabus for mathematics (2015) lists the core objectives of the JHS and primary schools' mathematics as follows;

The learner will:

- i. socialize,
- ii. adjust to and handle number words,
- iii. perform number operations,
- iv. make use of appropriate strategies of calculation.

Handbook of Research on Mathematics Teaching and Learning Frank K. Lester,2007-02-01 The audience remains much the same as for the 1992 Handbook namely mathematics education researchers and other scholars conducting work in mathematics education This group includes college and university faculty graduate students investigators in research and development centers and staff members at federal state and local agencies that conduct and use research within the discipline of mathematics The intent of the authors of this volume is to provide useful perspectives as well as pertinent information for conducting investigations that are informed by previous work The Handbook should also be a useful textbook for graduate research seminars In addition to the audience mentioned above the present Handbook contains chapters that should be relevant to four other groups teacher educators curriculum developers state and national policy makers and test developers and others involved with assessment Taken as a whole the chapters reflects the mathematics education research community s willingness to accept the challenge of helping the public understand what mathematics education research is all about and what the relevance of their research findings might be for those outside their immediate community

Mentoring for Wellbeing in Schools Benjamin Kutsyuruba, Frances K. Kochan, 2024-01-01 This volume of the Perspectives on Mentoring Series explores the role of mentoring in promoting wellbeing of both mentees or proteges and mentors in K 12 school settings At its core mentoring is about helping advising supporting and guiding mentees and proteges to gain a wide variety of skills abilities and or attributes Another outcome of mentoring less often discussed is the positive impact it can have on the mental health and wellbeing of both the mentor and mentee Of particular interest for this edited volume is how mentoring can promote mental health build resilience and develop capacity to maintain and sustain emotional psychological and social wellbeing for all in the K 12 school settings The notion of wellbeing in general includes both hedonic aspects of feeling good positive emotions and eudemonic conducive to happiness aspects of living well that entail experiences of positive relationships meaningfulness in life and work senses of mastery and personal growth autonomy and achievement This edited volume expands and adds to the existing literature on mentoring in schools by offering a collection of works that examine the connection between mentorship and wellbeing This volume includes chapters that describe effective mentoring for wellbeing detail positive approaches to mentoring youth offer recommendations for growing the wellbeing of pre service teachers early career teachers and mid late career teachers illustrate approaches to growing a community of educators through mentoring and developing teacher leaders as agents of change and facilitators of wellbeing and discuss studies and models for nurturing and promoting wellbeing among and through school leaders in national and international settings Through these chapters authors advocate for greater attention to how to support and nurture wellbeing as central to mentorship efforts in K 12 school settings

Evertson,Carol S. Weinstein,2013-10-31 Classroom management is a topic of enduring concern for teachers administrators and the public It consistently ranks as the first or second most serious educational problem in the eyes of the general public and beginning teachers consistently rank it as their most pressing concern during their early teaching years Management problems continue to be a major cause of teacher burnout and job dissatisfaction Strangely despite this enduring concern on the part of educators and the public few researchers have chosen to focus on classroom management or to identify themselves with this critical field The Handbook of Classroom Management has four primary goals 1 to clarify the term classroom management 2 to demonstrate to scholars and practitioners that there is a distinct body of knowledge that directly addresses teachers managerial tasks 3 to bring together disparate lines of research and encourage conversations across different areas of inquiry and 4 to promote a vigorous agenda for future research in this area To this end 47 chapters have been organized into 10 sections each chapter written by a recognized expert in that area Cutting across the sections and chapters are the following themes First positive teacher student relationships are seen as the very core of effective classroom management Second classroom management is viewed as a social and moral curriculum Third external reward and punishment strategies are not seen as optimal for promoting academic and social emotional growth and self regulated behavior Fourth to create orderly productive environments teachers must take into account student characteristics such as age developmental level race ethnicity cultural background socioeconomic status and ableness Like other research handbooks the Handbook of Classroom Management provides an indispensable reference volume for scholars teacher educators in service practitioners and the academic libraries serving these audiences It is also appropriate for graduate courses wholly or partly devoted to the study of classroom management
