A Treatise of Human Nature David Hume,2009-05-01 A Treatise of Human Nature first published between 1739 and 1740 is a philosophical text by the Scottish philosopher David Hume The work contains three books Of the Understanding Of the Passions and Of Morals Written by Hume when he was 26 it is considered by many to be Hume s best work and one of the most important books in philosophy s history Kant's

Groundwork for the Metaphysics of Morals Henry E. Allison, 2011-10-06 Henry E Allison presents a comprehensive commentary on Kant's Groundwork for the Metaphysics of Morals 1785. It differs from most recent commentaries in paying special attention to the structure of the work, the historical context in which it was written, and the views to which Kant was responding. Allison argues that despite its relative brevity, the Groundwork is the single most important work in modern moral philosophy and that its significance lies mainly in two closely related factors. The first is that it is here that Kant first articulates his revolutionary principle of the autonomy of the will, that is, the paradoxical thesis that moral requirements (duties) are self-imposed and that it is only in virtue of this that they can be unconditionally binding. The second is that for Kant, all other moral theories are united by the assumption that the ground of moral requirements must be located in some object of the will, the good, rather than the will itself, which Kant terms heteronomy. Accordingly, what from the standpoint of previous moral theories was seen as a fundamental conflict between various views of the good is reconceived by Kant as a family quarrel between various forms of heteronomy, none of which are capable of accounting for the unconditionally binding nature of morality. Allison goes on to argue that Kant expresses this incapacity by claiming that the various forms of heteronomy unavoidably reduce the categorical to a merely hypothetical imperative. Identity of Cities and City of Identities Ali

Cheshmehzangi, 2020-04-21 This book explores the hybridity of urban identities in multiple dimensions and at multiple scales, how they form as catalysts and mechanisms for urban transitions, and how they develop as city branding strategies and urban regeneration methods. Due to rapid globalisation, the notion of identity has become scarcer, more fragile, and inarguably more important. Given the significance of place and displacement for contemporary everyday life and the continuous advancement of technologies, identifying relations and values that define humans and their environments in various ways has become crucial. Divided into seven chapters, this book provides extensive coverage of urban identity, an often overlooked topic in the fields of urbanism, urban geography, and urban design. It approaches the topic from a novel dual perspective by exploring cities with tangible commonalities and shared strategies for refining their identities, and by highlighting cities and urban environments characterised by multiple identities. Based on a decade of research in this field, the book provides a multi-disciplinary perspective on urban identity. In addition to comprehensive information for students, it offers a key reference guide for urbanists, urban designers, and geographers, architectural and urban practitioners, decision makers, and governing bodies involved in urban development strategies.
