

YELLOW LEAF FASHION 2

Yellow Leaf Fashion Financial Analysis

Ratios

Ratios are a useful tool for analyzing a company's performance. Ratios can be used to compare trends and changes for a single company from year to year but are more commonly used to compare different companies. By calculating a ratio between two or more accounts, the amount in these accounts is less important, allowing a company to compare its financials to another company within its industry, regardless of size. Each type of ratio has a specific benchmark that shows a favorable ratio.

Liquidity

Current Ratio. The current ratio is calculated by dividing current assets by current liabilities. A desired ratio is above 2.0. Yellow Leaf Fashion has a current ratio of 4.83, indicating that the company has vastly more current assets than current liabilities. This ratio indicates a strong financial standing for the company.

Quick Ratio. By adding cash, short-term investments and net receivables then dividing the sum by current liabilities, the quick or acid-test ratio is computed. This ratio should show at least one dollar of quick assets per dollar of liabilities to be considered advantageous. This ratio explains a company's ability to pay its current liabilities with cash and cash equivalents. With a ratio of 3.88, Yellow Leaf Fashion should be able to easily pay off debts with its cash and cash equivalents, indicating a strong financial position.

Activity

Accounts Receivable Turnover. Calculated by dividing net sales by average net receivables, the accounts receivable turnover shows how many times its account receivable is replaced in a year by customers paying for merchandise. The accounts receivable turnover for Yellow Leaf Fashion is 2.87, which is below typically desired rates of 5-10 in most industries. This lower ratio suggests that customers are not paying in a timely manner or are not paying at all, as shown by the 4% allowance for uncollectable accounts.
