However little known the feelings or views of such a man may be on his first entering a neighbourhood, this truth is so well fixed in the minds of the surrounding families, that he is considered the rightful property of some one or other of their daughters. "My dear Mr. Bennet," said his friend to him one day, "have you heard that Netherfield Park is let at last?" Mr. Bennet replied that he had not. "But it is," returned she; "for Mrs. Long has just been here, and she told me all about it." Mr. Bennet made no answer. "Do you not want to know who has taken it?" cried his wife impatiently. "You want to tell me, and I have no objection to hearing it." This was invitation enough. "Why, my dear, you must know, Mrs. Long says that Netherfield is taken by a young man of large fortune from the north of England; that he came down on Monday in a chaise and four to see the place, and was so much delighted with it, that he agreed with Mr. Morris immediately. He is to take possession before the end of the week, and is to be married on the 29th." "O! what a single man! What a large fortune!—What does he do?" "I know not and do not care. He is married or not, I do not know; and he is almost sure to be married before he has had time to take possession of his house; for he will have a great deal to settle." "How can it affect them?" "My dear Mr. Bennet," replied his wife, "how can it? How can it affect them? My dear Mr. Bennet," replied his wife, "how can it? How can it affect them?"
