A Theoretical and Practical Grammar of the French Language ... Jean-Pons-Victor Lecoutz de Levizac,1846 Language, Text, Subject Malcolm Kevin Read,1992 The central concern of this radically innovative study is to offer a critique of traditional Hispanism in the light of its assumption of a transcendental subject and its corresponding insistence on the autonomy of the literary text Rereading canonic Spanish texts from Renaissance humanism to modernist literature Read deploys a theoretical basis of post structuralist thinking and brings Kristeva Foucault Althusser Eagleton and other important theorists to bear on a field hardly touched by such approaches

Chapters 1 and 2 dealing with Garcilaso de la Vega and Calderonian drama respectively argue the need to relate cultural development to the transition from medieval organicism to bourgeois animism Chapters 3 and 4 which treat the Enlightenment figures Mart n Sarmiento and Jovellanos show how rationalism presupposes a binding of the body of language Chapters 5 and 6 argue that the neo idealist view of language in modern linguistics and literature posits an overdetermined subject which is a symptom of and a reaction to the reification of capitalism Read s study not only provides new readings of canonic texts but also brings under critical scrutiny some of the assumptions about the human subject and the role of writing and literature that are implicit in the construction of the field of Hispanism itself Language Text Subject is recommended for scholars and students of literary theory and Spanish literature culture and linguistics
