

Patented and controversial — could be used in medical treatments, new endangered species, bring back extinct species, low success rate, decrease biodiversity

Genetic engineering — changing an organism's DNA to give the organism new traits

Recombinant DNA — DNA with genes from more than one organism; genes often inserted into bacterial plasmids

Transgenic bacteria — have plasmid with recombinant DNA, used to make human insulin

Transgenic plants — bacteria with recombinant DNA infect plants; used to make crops resistant to disease, insects, frost

Transgenic animals — gene must be inserted in fertilized egg, used for medical research and to study gene expression

Concerns — long-term effects of GM crops on human health, biodiversity; possible unintended consequences

Section 9.5

Gene sequencing — determining the sequence of a gene or an entire genome

Genomics — study of entire genomes; can include sequencing of entire genomes, compare genomes within and across species to find similarities and differences among different organisms

Human Genome Project — sequenced entire human genome; still working on identifying all genes, finding their locations, and determining their functions

Bioinformatics — using computer databases to organize and analyze the vast amounts of data that result from studies of genomes (and other biological information)

DNA microarrays — allow scientists to study the expression of many genes at one time; used to compare gene expression in different types of cells

Proteomics — study and comparison of proteins within and across species; used to study evolutionary relationships and human diseases

Section 9.8

Genetic screening — the process of testing DNA to determine a person's risk of having or passing on a genetic disorder; can use PCR analysis

Detecting disorders — tests can detect genes that produce disorders such as cystic fibrosis
