These researchers have identified four categories of leadership: transformational, transactional, autocratic, and laissez-faire. Transformational leaders inspire and motivate their followers to achieve extraordinary results. Transactional leaders focus on the exchange of rewards for performance. Autocratic leaders make decisions unilaterally and control their subordinates closely. Laissez-faire leaders provide little direction and allow their subordinates to make their own decisions. Research has shown that transformational leadership is most effective in promoting organizational performance, while autocratic leadership is most effective in promoting compliance. Transactional leadership is most effective in promoting performance in routine tasks, while laissez-faire leadership is most effective in promoting creativity. These four categories of leadership are not mutually exclusive, and many leaders exhibit characteristics of more than one category. For example, a leader may be transformational in some situations and autocratic in others. Understanding these different leadership styles can help you identify the strengths and weaknesses of different leaders and choose the most effective leader for your organization.
