Archaeology Of The Cinema:

The Great Art of Light and Shadow Laurent Mannoni, 2000 Widely regarded by historians of the early moving picture as the best work yet published on pre cinema The Great Art of Light and Shadow Archaeology of the Cinema throws light on a fascinating range of optical media from the twelfth century to the turn of the twentieth First published in French in 1994 and now translated into English Laurent Mannoni's account projects a broad picture of the subject area now known as pre cinema Starting from the earliest uses of the camera obscura in astronomy and entertainment Mannoni discusses among many other devices the invention and early years of the magic lantern in the seventeenth century the peepshows and perspective views of the eighteenth century and the many weird and wonderful nineteenth century attempts to recreate visions of real life in different ways and forms This fully illustrated and accessible account of a strange mixture of science magic art and deception introduces to an English speaking readership many aspects of pre cinema history from other European countries Archaeology of the Cinema C. W. Ceram, 1965 Archaeology of the Cinema- C. W. Ceram, Archaeology of the Cinema by C. W. Ceram C. W. Ceram, 1965 Archaeology of the Cinema Kurt W. Marek, 1965 Archaeology of the Cinema C.W. Ceram (Schriftsteller), 1965 Ex-centric Cinema Janet Harbord, 2016-10-20 In the beginning cinema was an encounter between humans images and machine technology revealing a stream of staccato gestures micrographic worlds and landscapes seen from above and below In this sense cinema's potency was its ability to bring other non human modes of being into view to forge an encounter between multiple realities that nonetheless co exist Yet the story of cinema became through its institutionalization one in which the human swiftly assumed centrality through the literary crafting of story character and the expression of interiority Ex-centric Cinema takes an archaeological approach to the study of cinema through the writings of philosopher Giorgio Agamben arguing that whilst we have a century long tradition of cinema the possibility of what cinema may have become is not lost but co exists in the present as an unexcavated potential The term given to this history is ex-centric cinema describing a centre less moving image culture where animals children ghosts and machines are privileged vectors where film is always an incomplete project and where audiences are a coming community of ephemeral connections and links Discussing such filmmakers as Harun Farocki the Lumiere Brothers Guy Debord and Wong Kar wai Janet Harbord draws connections with Agamben to propose a radically different way of thinking about cinema Film History as Media Archaeology Thomas Elsaesser, 2025-10-01 Since cinema has entered the digital era its very nature has come under renewed scrutiny Countering the death of cinema debate Film History as Media Archaeology presents a robust argument for the cinema's current status as a new epistemological object of interest to philosophers while also examining the presence of moving images in the museum and art spaces as a challenge for art history The current study is the fruit of some twenty years of research and writing at the interface of film history media theory and media archaeology by one of the acknowledged pioneers of the new film history and media archaeology It joins the efforts of other media scholars to locate cinema's historical emergence and subsequent transformations within the broader field of media change and interaction as we experience them today

Cinematosophical Introduction to the Theory of Archaeology Aleksander Dzbyński, 2020-02-03 What is archaeology A research field dealing with monuments A science A branch of philosophy Dzbyński suggests the simple but thoughtful equation Archaeology = History + Knowledge This book consists of 8 chapters presenting a collection of characteristic philosophical attitudes important for archaeology It discusses the historicity of archaeological sources the source of the algorithmic approach in archaeological reasoning and the accuracy of logical and irrational thinking In general this book is concerned with the history of archaeologists search for a suitable methodology All these issues are discussed in relation to two main intellectual trends of archaeology to the present day processual and post processual archaeology Processualism introduced and developed the idea of algorithmic and universal reasoning in archaeology while post processualism focused attention on the individual value of a monument and the archaeologist himself These are still two foundations on which the present knowledge of the past is based and thus their defining role cannot be overestimated An additional layer of narrative visible right from the beginning of the book is the gradual discovery of the relationship between archaeology and popular culture especially film and literature Its aim is both illustration and explanation It is intended that the reader receives not only information and knowledge but also a deeper emotional reference which is connected with the reception of works of art

Videographic Cinema Jonathan Rozenkrantz, 2020-10-01 In 1957 A Face in the Crowd incorporated live video images to warn about the future of broadcast TV In 2015 Kung Fury was infused with analogue noise to evoke the nostalgic feeling of watching an old VHS tape Between the two films numerous ones would incorporate video images to imagine the implications of video practices Drawing on media archaeology Videographic Cinema shows how such images and imaginaries have emerged changed and remained over time according to their shifting technical historical and institutional conditions Rediscovering forgotten films like Anti Clock 1979 and reassessing ones like Lost Highway 1997 Jonathan Rozenkrantz charts neglected chapters of video history including self confrontation techniques in psychiatry their complex relation with surveillance and the invention/discovery of the videographic psyche by artists therapists and filmmakers Spanning six decades Videographic Cinema discovers an epistemic shift from prospective imaginaries of surveillance and control conditioned on video as a medium for live transmission to retrospective ones concerned with videotape as a recording memory It ends by considering videographic filmmaking itself as a form of archaeology in the age of analogue obsolescence

Holtorf, 2007 The rise of public archaeology the popularity of TV archaeology and widespread stereotypes about the profession of archaeology have changed the way archaeologists relate to the public A socially meaningful archaeology needs to take seriously where the popular demand and the appeal of archaeology actually lie Arguably non archaeologists know better what the subject is all about than most of its professionals do This is the first full length study of the meaning of archaeology in contemporary popular culture It is fully illustrated with cartoons by Quentin Drew In popular culture archaeology is associated with adventurous fieldwork criminological clue hunting great revelations and responsible care for threatened resources The emphasis is on doing archaeology rather than on its actual results Cornelius Holtorf argues in this provocative account of more than two years of research that archaeological companies and institutions are not in the business of understanding the past but of enhancing people's lives through adventures mysteries and revelations and by offering a chance to care Archaeology may be an academic discipline but even more so it is a widely recognized positively valued and well underpinned brand As we can expect from Cornelius Holtorf the book contains not only its share of facts and analysis but also more than a few controversial arguments about the present and future roles of archaeology in society It is unmissable for professional archaeologists working in the heritage sector as well as for students of archaeology anthropology heritage and museum studies cultural studies science studies and related disciplines Dr Cornelius Holtorf is Assistant Professor in Archaeology at the University of Lund in Sweden Quentin Drew is a cartoonist as well as Lecturer in Archaeology and Director of Foundation Studies at the University of Wales Lampeter
