Select all that apply:

Mary lives in a small secluded village. A long time ago, the village prevented trade with surrounding communities in order to support the locals. This has worked to Mary's advantage as she is the only one in the village with cows and she has a monopoly over the trade of milk and cheese.

The village council is considering the possibility of allowing trade with surrounding villages. They believe that the entire community would benefit from a greater selection and variety of goods, as well as more customers for the goods that their village produces.

The chairman of the village council argues that removing the trade barriers would result in increased competition leading to increased quality of products and competitive prices, as everyone in the village would benefit.

The notion of removing the trade barriers will be put to a vote at the next council meeting.

The chairman of the village council realises that some of the villagers, including Mary, will be disadvantaged by the removal of trade barriers. However, he votes in favour of the removal of trade barriers as he believes that the benefits for the whole village outweighs the cost that a few of them would have to suffer.

What branch of ethics and what ethical theory is the chairman of the village council using to justify his vote?

(Select all that apply)

- A. Teleological
- B. Ethical egoism
- C. Utilitarianism
- D. Deontological
- E. Rights theory
- F. Justice theory
- G. I don't know

A and C are correct as the focus here is on the greatest good for the greatest number. This is a utilitarianism perspective, and this is part of the teleological (consequential) branch of ethical theories.

B, D, E and F are not correct as it is not ethical egoism (focused on the chief's own self-interest), nor is it linked to the deontological perspectives of rights or justice theory.

• Question 2

Accountants service the public interest in a variety of ways. This may include providing useful information to support decision making in business, government and social organisations, as well as providing community service by acting as members or committees of charities and not-for-profits as well as providing financial counselling.

Accountants also rely on skill and judgement when providing information and advice, rather than just focusing on compliance with a set of rules. This requires professional judgement, which is a critical attribute of any profession.

Regulatory fiat is a term used to describe how the accounting profession may operate in future if it fails to be a useful contributor to society and the public interest. Which of the following best describes this situation?

- A. People hire accountants because they need useful information to support decision making.
- B. Accountants are employed so that organisations can demonstrate stewardship of resources.
- C. Accountants are employed or engaged because the government has mandated certain work must be performed.
- D. Accountants are losing their ability to self-regulate because of lost credibility, and this has led to greater external regulation.
- E. I don't know

C is correct. Regulatory fiat is where a rule is mandated and must be followed. So, if governments mandate that accounts must be audited, it automatically creates work for auditors – whether or not the work is valuable or useful. So, if accountants are employed because government has required it, this means we are not as important or useful, which limits our ability to be professionals.

The Unaccountable & Ungovernable Corporation Frank Clarke, Graeme Dean, Matthew Egan, 2014-03-21 The Corporation is a major vehicle of business activity worldwide It incurs social costs and generates benefits that continually change hence whether it still provides a net benefit to society is contestable Evidence based observations of the last decade of corporate sagas and the role of accounting and auditing suggests a serious rethink is needed about how commerce is pursued and in particular whether the current corporate form has passed its use by date The authors of this new book including internationally renowned accounting scholars argue that the two major governance tools of accounting and auditing require major makeovers Beginning by analyzing the global sweep of deregulation that corporations experienced since 2000 the authors go on to discuss the various scandals and crises that characterized the subsequent period culminating in yet more calls for further deregulation Having thoroughly assessed the status quo they provide a series of urgent recommendations for reforms designed to bring the corporation back to the real world and restore its purpose This book will be of great interest to students and academics across accounting business law and finance especially more advanced students at undergraduate and postgraduate level
