

Day 4
Study Question
What causes the weather?

As well as temperature and wind, the sun also affects precipitation. As water energy heats Earth's oceans, rivers, and lakes, it causes some of the water to evaporate into water vapor. The water vapor rises and increases humidity in the atmosphere, where it begins to cool. As it cools, the water condenses into droplets. The droplets collect in clouds, which get heavier and heavier until they can hold no more water. Finally, the water is released, and it falls to Earth as precipitation. This cycle of evaporation, condensation, and precipitation is called the water cycle.

Other combinations of temperature, wind, and precipitation can sometimes lead to distinct weather events, such as storms. These storm systems usually occur where two air masses of different levels of heat, pressure, and humidity meet. In that way, even the hottest, fiercest storms are driven by the sun.
