Directions: Read the scenario and underline all sources of income for the Brown family; put a box around all expenses for the Brown family. This is worth 5 points.

Tia and John Brown have been married for two years and are awaiting the arrival of their first baby in two short months. John is a branch manager at a local bank which provides adequate benefits including health insurance for John, Tia, and their newborn. John's net income is $750.00 paid bi-weekly. Tia works part-time running a wedding coordination business out of their home which provides an additional $800 net income per month after taxes are paid.

In the past, John and Tia have not used a spending plan. Their expenses were high, but they always managed to get by without using credit cards. However, they also do not have much in their savings account. John and Tia have set a short and long-term goal in preparation for the baby's arrival. Their long-term goal is to deposit $50 each month into a savings account for the baby's college fund. Their short-term goal is to begin saving at least $150 per month for emergencies to begin building their new wardrobe. They know to be able to achieve these goals and get their finances organized, they must develop a spending plan. They tracked their expenses for a month and here is an analysis of their current spending.

John and Tia live in a one-bedroom one bathroom rental condominium in a large metropolitan area. They pay $900 per month, and this includes utilities. They know that this will become a bit cramped with one bedroom already being used as Tia's office, but will become the baby's room. However, they really like their home and seldom have overnight guests.

John drives a Toyota Camry which they own without payments. Every six months they allocate $200 for maintenance, repairs, gasoline, and oil changes. Tia uses the public subway system to travel around the city when necessary. This costs the Brown family $50 per month.

Tia and John love to eat out and meet on Mondays and Wednesdays at a café near John's office for a lunch date. Friday nights they also eat dinner at one of their favorite restaurants, often with friends. They spend an average of
