to understand why British administrators and politicians believed that such a strategy would work and what exactly underpinned their reasons It is argued that British efforts to defuse and disrupt the activities of Indian nationalists in the interwar years were predicated on certain cultural beliefs about Indian political behaviour and capacity However this was not simply a case of Orientalist policy making Faced with a complicated political situation a staggering amount of information and a constant need to produce analysis the officers of the Raj imposed their own cultural expectations upon events and evidence to render them comprehensible Indians themselves played an often overlooked role in the formulation of this political intelligence especially the relatively few Indians who maintained close ties to the colonial government such as T B Sapru and M R Jayakar These men were not just mediators as they have frequently been portrayed but were in fact important tacticians whose activities further demonstrated the weaknesses of the colonial information economy The author employs recently released archival material including the Indian Political Intelligence records to situate the 1935 Act in its multiple and overlapping contexts internal British culture and politics the imperial information order in India and the politics of Indian nationalism This rich and nuanced study is essential reading for scholars working on British Indian and imperial history
