Digital Energetics Anne Pasek, Cindy Kaiying Lin, Zane Griffin Talley Cooper, Jordan B. Kinder, 2023-05-23 Exploring the connections between energy and media and what those connections mean for our current moment Energy and media are the entangled middles of social life and also of each other This volume traces the contours of both a media analytic of energy and an energy analytic of media across the cultural environmental and economic relations they undergird Digital Energetics argues that media and energy require joint theorization not only in their potential to universalize but also in the many contingent and intermeshed relations that they bind together across contemporary informational and fossil regimes Focusing specifically on digital operations the coauthors analyze how data and energy have jointly modulated the character of the materiality and labor of digital systems in a warming world Anne Pasek provides a brief energy history of the bit tracing how the electrification and digitization of American computing propelled a turn toward efficiency as both a solution and instigator of parallel crises in the workforce and the climate Zane Griffin Talley Cooper traces these concerns within cryptographic proof of work systems and the heat they necessarily produce and seek to manage Following heat through the twinned histories of thermodynamics and information theory he argues that such systems are best approached as a paradigmatic rather than exceptional example of computing infrastructures Cindy Kaiying Lin focuses on the practical and political frictions created as database and management designs move from the Global North to South illustrating how the energy constraints and software cultures of Indonesia open new spaces of autonomy within environmental governance Finally Jordan B Kinder offers a theorization of platform energetics demonstrating how public energy discourses and settler land claims are entangled in the digital infrastructures of data colonialism in Canada Congressional Record United States. United States of America Congressional Record, Proceedings and Debates of the 113th Congress Second Session Volume 160 - Part 3 , The Politics of Writing Studies Robert Samuels,2017-09-07 A friendly critique of the field The Politics of Writing Studies examines a set of recent pivotal texts in composition to show how writing scholarship in an effort to improve disciplinary prestige and garner institutional resources inadvertently reproduces structures of inequality within American higher education Not only does this enable the exploitation of contingent faculty but it also puts writing studies a field that inherently challenges many institutional hierarchies in a debased institutional position and at odds with itself Instead of aligning with the dominant paradigm of research universities where research is privileged over teaching theory over practice the sciences over the humanities and graduate education over undergraduate writing studies should conceive itself in terms more often associated with labor By identifying more profoundly as workers as a collective in solidarity with contingent faculty writing professionals can achieve solutions to the material problems that the field in its best moments wants to address Ultimately the change compositionists want to see in the university will not come from high theory or the social science research agenda it must come from below Offering new insight into a complex issue The Politics of Writing Studies will be of great interest to writing studies professionals university administrators and anyone interested in the political economy of education and the reform of institutions of higher education in America General Acts, Resolutions, and Memorials Adopted by the ...
